THE GREAT WHITE SHARK.
The man eating fish par excellence is the great white shark. It is otherwise known by the name of man eater. Occasionally specimens are seen on both coasts of the United States, though its more customary habitat is in tropical waters. This frightful creature attains a length of nearly forty feet, and it is able to swallow a man whole. This fact is proved by an experiment which sailors are fond of making when such a shark is captured. The skull being preserved, they amuse themselves by crawling one after another through the distended jaws. It would be unwise to do this, however, when the head has been freshly cut off, because under such conditions the jaws will snap together severely for some time afterward if anything is placed between them.
Legend of the Moss Rose.
A German tradition gives the origin of the moss rose as follows: An angel came to earth in mortal guise. He sought a place of shelter and repose after his labors of love, but every door was shut against the heavenly visitor. At length the angel, being very weary, sank upon the ground and over him a rosebush spread like a tent. It caught upon its outspread leaves the falling dew which would otherwise have drenched the messenger of love. Waiting, the angel said to the rose: Thou hast yielded the shelter that man denied; A proof of my love shall with thee abide And the green moss gathered about the stem While the dewdrops shone like a diadem. Crowning the blushing flower.
