with this law and he thinks there will to a considerable extent this The Central Oregon Irfirst year. The Central Oregon Ir-rigation Co, have signified their wil-lingness in keeping their ditch banks free from weeds and William Wil-son, a large land owner in this section, has employed a man to destroy weeds on his places. There is a general feeling however, that the county should take care of the weeds in county roads and not place that added responsibility on the tarmer i whose land the roads adjoin.
