FOOD AND FINANCE.

One of the Portland evening papers has started an innovation in the shape of a page on which it proposes to carry advertisements of foods, the purity of which it guarantees. It would be a happy thing if we could know that all the foods advertised in any part of the paper were pure but it is perhaps too much to ask that a newspaper office be turned into a laboratory where a new advertiser's foods were analyzed while the business office looked up his rating. Nevertheless it would seem almost necessary for the paper to travel the whole road, for no advertiser would care to submit to the implication that unless his wares were shown on the "purity page" they were not pure. If the plan is to drive from its columns all impure foods we trust that it succeeds, although the method is a little round-about.

It is unfortunate that this purity business should be limited to the matter of foods. The oil company advertising that followed the food page was a very good sample of the get-rich-quick stuff that many papers excluded from their columns at the same time that they shut out the impure foods.

COUNTY DIVISION

This county division business has many favorable aspects at the present time. The north end of the county is going ahead with its plans for a division to be voted on at the November election. If the southwestern part of the county brings forward a plan it will receive the help of the north end; if it does not do so and the other new county is established that source of aid is gone forever. The division may not carry if it does not there is little lost and if it does there is much to gain.

The county is too large. Its administration is costly from the mere reason of its size. Its different sections have little in common. Why not make three counties of it, Crook, Jefferson and Deschutes?

In connection with Monday's tragedy the Coroner saw fit to come over from Prineville, bringing a physician with him. Why this action was taken is impossible to surmise. Diligence in office is one thing, but rank waste is another. There was absolutely no need for the Coroner, and even less excuse for a Prineville physician's coming. The trip brings to memory a former occasion when a county seat physician was imported after a death here, and his charge to the county was $100. Common sense and the interests of taxpayers demand that this sort of extravagance receive full publicity, and if possible official discouragement from the County Court when the bills are presented.

It is not pleasant, but it is wise again to remind parents of the dangers of the river. Each of the last three summers has witnessed drownings at Bend. Among the victims have been a number of children. And now that warm weather is again here, the same old carelessness is being evidenced, and children are again being permitted to play about in boats on the pond. It is the duty of every parent to see to it that his or her children keep off the water unless they can swim well, and even then carelessness playing on the pond, such as one can see almost any afternoon, is a mighty dangerous pastime. The sad lessons of the past should be a protection for the future.

Bend for two years has forsworn Fourth of July celebrations and has joined with its neighbors in their entertainment. Therefore it is doubly fitting that Bend should be the host this year, and fitting hat is neighbors should reciprocate the courtesies of the past. That the celebration will be a good thing for Bend—even if at considerable trouble and expense—is a certainty. That it will prove attractive to the visitor is equally sure. Altogether, those who have aroused interest in the movement, and are doing most of the work, deserve congratulation and enthusiastic support.

ONE VIEW OF SLEEP.

Likened to the Freezing of Water in a Pond or Bowl.

The approach of sleep is much like the freezing of water in pond or bowl. Faint spicules dart from the sides; motes and dots, barely perceptible, swim in the midst. One might imagine the process not less grateful to the long unsheltered brain, for as the one desires for the time being to be defended from that thought which is its own component essence, so might the other seek a coat proof against the plunge of an icicle, formed of a like element. Slight agitation, applied with judgment, will help the matter on. The introduction of a finger will sometimes change a bowl of congealing water to a solid mass. A bit of ice slid in at the proper moment will help on the water's freezing, and so will thinking on your latest dream help to induce slumber.

Transparent and cold as are ice and sleep nothing will keep brain and water safer and warmer. All glances from them and sought stir up mud or mud. The parallel holds to the last, for nothing can more resemble the rude awakening of a slumberer than the sudden breaking of ice, and nothing is more like a gradual and pleasant awakening than the melting thaw where beginning and end are alike indiscernible.—G. E. D. Phelps in "A Farmer's Notebook."

BALANCING BOWLDERS.

Two of These Natural Curiosities Sway in the Berkshires.

For many years one of the greatest natural curiosities in Berkshire county and which in earlier and later years has been visited by armies of the curious is Balance rock, four miles north of Pittsfield and near the south line of Lanesboro.

This great marble boulder is now of a deep brown color and is scarred and riven by the storms of centuries. It is thirty feet high, fifteen feet wide and is so wonderfully poised on a few feet at its base as to tremble at the slightest touch. It weighs many hundreds of tons and resembles from several points of view a huge egg, a blacksmith's forge and the back of an elephant. It resembles no rock to be found on the Taconic mountain range or its foothills, near which latter it stands in sphinxlike grandeur and silence.

It is not generally known that there is another balance rock in Berkshire about of equal interest with that in Lanesboro. It is on the highest point of the Monument mountain, where it slopes toward the east, and is 700 feet above the river at the village of Housatonic. Its estimated weight is over 100 tons.—Pittsfield (Mass.) Cor. New York Sun.

A Daring Skater.

Shortly after the fight at Jena in 1806 Napoleon dispatched an officer to Marshal Mortier requiring him to seize certain important towns without delay. When the officer arrived at the mouth of the Elbe, where the river is seven and one-half miles wide, he was threatened with serious loss of time. The river was just covered with ice, therefore to row over was out of the question. He could not cross by the nearest bridge without going twenty miles out of his way on roads heavy with snow. So he resolved to skate across the thin, freshly formed ice. Had he tried walking he would have sunk at once, but by skimming along on his skates at the top of his speed he got over the river both dry and unharmed. By this daring deed he saved six hours. Did what Napoleon bade him do and won great credit for his bold and clever exploit.

Why Not?

Among the mountain-ers of Carolina there is a strong feeling of resentment toward anything that savors of charity. In illustration of their independence Miss Margaret W. Morley tells this story in "The Carolina Mountains":

A stranger fed a mountain woman, who, having come to town to "trade," stopped at the door, tired and hungry, to sell her butter. The next day the woman came back with a chicken.

"Why, no," said the lady, "I cannot take your chicken. I gave you the dinner."

"Say you did?"

"Yes."

"Say you gave me the dinner?"

"Yes."

"Well, if you can give me a dinner, why can't I give you a chicken?"

At the Wrong House.

"Have you a Charles Dickens in your home?" asked the polite book agent.

"No," she snapped.

"Or a Robert Louis Stevenson?"

"No."

"Or a Gene Field?"

"No, we ain't an' what's more, we don't run a boarding house here either. If you're looking for them fellows you might try the house across the street. I understand they keep roomers."—Detroit Free Press.

The Helpful Spirit.

"It's funny how Sandhill can tell those old stories and get a laugh out of them."

"Nobody laughs at the stories. It's Sandhill's enjoyment of Sandhill's density that makes every man a contributing factor."—Cleveland Plain Dealer

The Constitution.

"Father, what is the constitution?"

"My son, it is a document that is most sacred to the party that is not in power."—New York Sun.

The beginning of excellence is to be free from error.—Quintilian.

VERDICT OF THE PRINCE.

Napoleon's Great Pride in the Infant King of Rome.

A certain Frenchman of spirit once found himself in great distress. It was necessary to find a means of livelihood or die in misery. There was a vacant place that was worth 10,000 francs a year. He wanted it, but how could he get it? It was under the first empire. The king of Rome was a child in the cradle. The aspirant thought of an ingenious plan to bring about the success of his hopes.

He wrote a petition, addressed it to the young king and, through the friendship of a general officer attached to the emperor, got it presented to Napoleon.

The emperor took the petition and, seeing the superscription, began to smile. "Very well," said he, "let the petition be carried to him to whom it is addressed."

Four chamberlains conducted our hero before the cradle of the infant king. After a profound bow he began in a high voice to read his petition. From time to time he bowed before the cradle. As is the manner of infants, the child uttered several unintelligible sounds.

After having taken his leave respectfully the petitioner returned to Napoleon, who said, "Ah, well, what response?"

"Sire, his majesty said nothing."

"Who says nothing gives consent," said the emperor. "The petition is granted."—Youth's Companion.
