

GIBB RECOVERS LINE

Fish Lost a Year Ago Turns up on Sunday at Crane Prairie.

For the past year R. B. Gibb has been mourning the loss of a line that was carried away by one of the largest fish ever hooked in the Deschutes river. Not only was it the largest ever hooked but according to all accounts, the largest that ever got away. The loss of the fish, however, did not worry Mr. Gibb. He knew almost anyone could lose his fish. They were being lost all up and down the river every day. But having the line carried away did vex him and all winter he had it on his mind, planning what he could do to recover the treasure.

On Sunday his chance came. He was fishing at Crane Prairie and saw the identical trout in a clear pool. The fish had managed to coil up the line and carried it as a sort of necklace. Mr. Gibb recognized it at once. He gently dropped a fly above his old friend, this time attached to a stronger line, and in a moment had him out on the bank. He removed the old line and the fish slipped back into the water. Mr. Gibb now has the line neatly coiled to prove his story.

With Mr. Gibb was R. B. Hallock and a party of friends from Portland who had what they described as the best fishing ever saw. They are all members of the Portland Anglers' Club and expect to return to enjoy the local fishing and bring friends with them.

A. R. ROGERS IS VERY OPTIMISTIC

ber trade, he emphatically states, Canada, for instance, is in far worse condition than are the United States, even in the districts almost solely dependent upon lumber manufacturing for prosperity. Labor, he maintains, costs from 30 to 45 per cent. more, per unit of accomplishment, in Canada than here, this, coupled with the duty paid on American mill machinery imported into Canada, making it impossible for Canadian manufacturers to turn out lumber at prices even competitive with American lumber. The Rogers mills, and timber holdings are on both sides of the international line, so that on this head he can speak with authority.

Country's Condition Sound.

"But it is entirely wrong to give the impression that the country is in a bad way," Mr. Rogers continued with emphasis. "Ours is the soundest country in the world, and I honestly believe that never before was it in better shape. The eastern banks are literally bulging with money—there is no money shortage, or anything even approaching one. Commercial loans are being made at four per cent. and less; there is no difficulty in getting money, but rather in using it advantageously when one secures it."

The present depression, Mr. Rogers believes, is the culmination of the liquidation that has been in progress since the panic of 1907. That is, up to that time business had been running "wide open." Since then conservatism has been the order of the day, few new ventures have been started, banks have been drawing in loans and accumulating cash, and the business world, in effect, has been running at half speed. The end of this period, believes the lumberman, is nearly reached. Very good times are assured; new legislation is now an accomplished fact, and there are no broken heads; conditions apparently will be better for the railroads; money will once more get into generous circulation.

"Altogether," concluded Mr. Rogers, "I feel most optimistic. If there is anything unusual in our present position, it is due to national extravagance. For instance, automobiles have consumed billions of dollars—dollars gone to absolute waste, so far as real wealth production is concerned. And all along the line we Americans have developed the spending habit too lavishly. Also, labor is to blame. Hours are becoming shorter and shorter, so that actually each man is producing far less than ever before. In many cases, of course such shortening of work hours is eminently justifiable, but averaged up I believe the tendency is extremely dangerous and in the end will react on no one harder than on the laboring man himself."

Mr. Rogers left for Portland Friday night.
