

WHEN TO CUT ALFALFA

County Agriculturist Tells How to Get Best Results. By A. E. LOVETT, County Agriculturist.

There is a right time to cut alfalfa for obtaining the most hay during a season and for the good of the crop. Many reasons are given by men raising this crop for the time they cut for their hay and possibly the man who has no reason but cuts his crop on the same date each year is as near right as many of the others.

If we cut alfalfa too young, we get a larger percentage of water and less dry matter and the hay "shrinks" badly. If we cut the crop too late, we not only get "stummy" hay but also lose valuable feed in shattered leaves and injure the following crop.

In case of "backward" spring weather or attacks by insects, the first crop may not make No. 1 hay but it is necessary that it be harvested, whatever its condition, in order that the following crop may not be injured and may make a "good" crop.

The time to cut first year alfalfa is when the weeds begin to shade the alfalfa, "at do not cut too low. Never cut new alfalfa too close to the ground.

Get Rid of the Torment of Rheumatism. Remember how spry and active you were before you had rheumatism, backache, swollen, aching joints and stiff, painful muscles?

OUR SOILS NEED HUMUS. Addition of Vegetable Matter Will Increase Fertility. By A. E. LOVETT, County Agriculturist.

Most of us on farms in this section of the country fail to appreciate the fact that we are developing a desert soil. Our soil here, before it was cleared and farmed, probably has never grown anything but sagebrush, the juniper and a very little bunch grass.

Practically all of our soils today "park" or "blow" or "wash" and each of these conditions may be remedied by adding humus to the soil so affected.

The most efficient and valuable thing that we can use for "holding up" our soil is barnyard manure, preferably that well rotted. For our purpose, this manure may be spread on the land any time and plowed in at regular plowing.

The use of green manures will probably prove the most practical on the most of our farms, at present, because of the comparatively few livestock we keep.

of the crop, valuable for humus, be added to the soil. Few farmers can afford to add the necessary humus to all of their land in one season but all can add it in some form to at least a small patch each year and gradually build up the whole farm.

FINDS TOAD UNDERGROUND. A resident of the Whitaker Valley has sent to The Bulletin the following account of the finding underground of a live toad:

"Edw. Thatcher while engaged in excavating for a cistern, at a depth of 5 1/2 feet from the surface, uncovered a live toad of ordinary size. It was found encased in hardpan with no opening anywhere discernable. The location is on a gentle hill side. The surface soil is about two feet in depth. This is underlain with some rock and concrete of lime formation very hard—which continues beyond the depth reached by digging.
