

FAVOR MILLAGE FOR IRRIGATION

CONGRESS INSISTS ON RESOLUTION

Portland Men Who Say They Favor Irrigation Oppose Measure Which Delegates Favor—Days are Filled With Reports of Committees.

Going over the head of the resolutions committee, which was opposed to taking the action, the Irrigation Congress, at its last session on Saturday, directed the committee to bring in a resolution asking the legislature to levy a half mill tax with which to carry on irrigation in Oregon. A majority of the committee brought in the resolution but recommending that it not pass, whereupon the congress almost unanimously voted to agree with the minority, O. Laurgaard and Frank Sloan, and passed the resolution.

The leader in the opposition to the resolution was C. C. Chapman of Portland, who had at the banquet on Thursday night promised his own support and that of the Portland Commercial Club in aid of irrigation. With J. W. Brewer, formerly of Redmond, the vice-president of the congress, who had the naming of the resolutions committee, Mr. Chapman showed what many delegates felt was a hostile attitude to irrigation and to this section of the state.

The position he took on the resolutions committee indicated this, it was argued, and beyond that his attitude toward appointing a committee from the Portland Commercial Club to work with the legislative committee of the congress showed clearly where he stood. Although the congress appointed a committee to confer with the Commercial Club on this subject Mr. Chapman refused to permit his organization to take any action in the matter.

The feeling of the delegates which led up to the appointment of the committee and the appointment itself were described by the Oregonian as follows:

"A favorite pastime of the congress yesterday was to pass out praise for the Portland Commercial Club and the business men of this city for the interest that they have taken in irrigation affairs.

"The sentiment expressed at the Commercial Club banquet Thursday night that the business men of Portland stand ready to back up the congress in any reasonable requests upon the state was commented upon with approving terms by several of the speakers.

"By way of demonstrating the confidence of the irrigators in the business men of Portland, the congress yesterday passed a motion authorizing the president to appoint a committee of three of its members, who will confer with the Commercial Club and procure the appointment of ten members of that body to work with the legislative committee of the congress. The president appointed upon this committee C. S. Hudson, of Bend; A. M. Trow, of Ontario; and H. M. Cox, of Gilliam county."

"That the confidence was not justified seems to be the only deduction to be made from Mr. Chapman's attitude.

In Mr. Brewer's case, with the appointment of the resolutions committee in his hands, he wholly disregarded Bend, the largest town in the most important irrigation section in the state and the one sending the largest delegation to the congress. It is understood that as originally made up Mr. Brewer's lists showed a representative from Bend and one from Prineville but that at the last he was persuaded to change them on the representations of a resident of Redmond.

"The lack of recognition of a section that has taken so much interest in irrigation congresses in the past has led many of the returning delegates to express the opinion that the congress another year might see a considerable falling off in attendance. The congress opened on Thursday with 340 delegates on hand. Mayor Albee's address of welcome was responded to by A. O. Walker, of Alfalfa, who called attention to the fact that Western Oregon now pays nearly two thirds of the taxes of the state and that Eastern Oregon, which is the greater in area, should be developed so that it will be able to share the burden of taxation. He concluded that this development can be brought about only through irrigation, as most of the eastern part of the state cannot be made productive without water.

Following the appointment of committees the program went forward with reports from the different counties where irrigation had been practiced. J. N. B. Gerking and George Russell responding for Crook county. An interesting feature of the Thursday session was a report of O. Laurgaard on the Tumalo Project.

Thursday evening a banquet was given the delegates at the Commercial Club at which Duncan Marshall, minister of agriculture in Alberta, spoke.

Both Friday and Saturday general discussion of irrigation questions occupied the meetings until it was time for the resolutions committee to report. When it finally came and the next over the billage resolution took place, J. N. Teal, of Portland, led the opposition to the Chapman stand.

based on fundamental State development, sane economy and honest, business-like procedure, I now close this, my first message. And in closing I desire to express to you my confidence in the exceptional ability and high purpose of this Twenty-Eighth Legislative Assembly, and to reiterate my earnest desire of cooperating with you, and all the officers of the State to the utmost of my ability.

"I have purposely made this message far briefer than has been customary, seeking rather to have it echo something of my hopes for the future than to be a wearisome recapitulation of the past. It has, at least, conveyed to you and the people of Oregon my deep sense of appreciation for the honor and responsibility that have been given me."
