THRIFTY HOTEL GUESTS.
 The Mania For Stealing Little Souvenirs of Their Visits.
 We often hear complaints from tourists about inattention and lack of courtesy on the part of those whose duty it is to cater to the traveling public. But there is another side to the story. For instance, the custodians of places of historic or scenic interest frequently visited by travelers are obliged to maintain constant watch against the vandalism of souvenir hunters.
 What satisfaction can be found in mutilating and demolishing things of interest and value to procure a souvenir or in appropriating from well known hotels such property as knives, forks, pepper and salt shakers, napkins, towels and bath mats? The manager of a prominent hotel in New York even reports the disappearance of pillows from the bedrooms.
 The value of this stolen property yearly amounts to a very large sum. It has been the underlying cause for the appearance of such items as the following on menus: "Chicken en casserole in individual souvenir," or "Souvenir cocktail," in which the appetizer is served in a container bearing the house name and which container is given to the patron.
 There are numerous little souvenirs, such as silver plated trays, trapezoids, etc., for sale by various hotels to satisfy collectors.
 Not all things that disappear from hotels are taken with deliberate intention. The manager of one of the most fashionable hotels in New York has concluded that linen is not always purified, but is taken away unconsciously as wrappers for shoes and other articles when parking, and men, he says, unconsciously tuck bar dolies in their coat pockets after using them, and these are dropped at the next hotel visited.
 This wholesale purloining of hotel articles has led to the formation of a linen exchange. Many of the leading managers now have stock taken of all the foreign linen in their hotels, and at regular intervals this material is sent to its rightful owners, who then return linens not belonging to them.—Leeds'.

COMEDY IN BATTLE.
 Serio-Comic Incidents of the Zulu War in South Africa.
 The following story is told of an incident that occurred during the Zulu war in South Africa, when an over-whelming force of natives was opposed to a little band of English marines. From the Zulu host stepped forth a warrior laden with an ancient firearm, which he calmly mounted on a tripod in the open, while the marines looked on, admiring his pluck and wondering much what he proposed to do. At last one young marine suggested that their photographs were about to be taken, and by common consent no shots were fired.
 Having loaded his piece with great deliberation, the Zulu aimed it, sighted it and, leaning hard upon its butt, fired. The result knocked him head over heels backward, while a great roar went up from the delighted marines. He sat up, looking dazed, and then, the amusement over, he and his countrymen charged and were annihilated by a volley from the steadily aimed pieces of the little band of marines.
 During one of the many battles waged by the New Zealand Maoris against the British settlers the latter ran out of ammunition. At the moment when death seemed imminent a flag of truce appeared from the enemy's trenches and messengers came forward with a supply of cartridges to enable the white men to continue fighting.—Washington Star.

THE SICKROOM DOOR.

An Important Point.
 A city girl was taking a course in an agricultural college. After a lecture on "How to Increase the Milk Flow" she rose for a question.
 "How long," she blushingly inquired, "must one beat a cow before she will give whipped cream?"—Judge.

Professional Habit.
 "That policeman is too conscientious to be a evidence."
 "What do you mean?"
 "He arrested the growth of a vine on the front of his house when he found it was a porch climber."—Baltimore American.
Reasonable Enough.
 "What's your objection to the farm, mister?"
 "The land appears to be sunken."
 "But that's owing to the heavy crops."—Washington Herald.

HORSE BUYERS COMING.

A number of horse buyers from San Francisco arrived in town Sunday morning and left at once for Silver Lake, where horse sales will be held on Monday and Tuesday. They will arrive in Bend on their return on Wednesday and on Thursday a sale will be held here. It is reported that these buyers are purchasing for their own account and are prepared to be more liberal in the matter of inspection and otherwise than the representatives of the foreign governments who have recently made purchases in this section. J. L. Nichols of Prineville is their local representative and prospective sellers are advised to bring their horses to the Aune or the Wenandy barn for the sale on Thursday.

DOG OWNERS.

All owners of dogs are hereby advised that the strap muzzle which are in use in town are not sufficient to comply with the existing ordinance. Wire muzzles must be provided. Dogs wearing anything but wire muzzles will be shot.
