ON THE HOG.

Every farmer who sees this paper is urged to read the article by Professor Potter on hog raising in Central Oregon. If the lesson of that article is learned the county will be repaid many times for the cost of the extension work it has agreed to share this year. None of the expenditures authorized by the county court will bring more than that for the agriculturist, which it provided so reluctantly.

Ever since the slaughter of swine which followed the increase in the price of wheat began stock experts have been pointing out that Oregon would shortly find herself where she was a few years ago—importing hogs from Nebraska—with the slow up-hill gains of the last four years all lost. That will mean a flow of money out of the state and a return to a condition believed to have been done away with, all because our farmers have been caught with their eggs in one basket.

The aim of the Nebraska farmers is said to be to raise more corn, to feed more pigs, to sell for money with which to raise more corn to feed more pigs and so on. Here we have not raised enough wheat for feed, we have depended on buying it and now that wheat has gone up we have begun to kill our pigs. And because everyone else is doing it the price of pork is way down. Soon though, the balance will go the other way. Because so many hogs have been killed those remaining will increase in price until they more than reflect the cost of the wheat necessary to finish them for the market.

Read Professor Potter's article. Keep the few hogs you have left even though it costs something to feed them. You will be repaid in the end. And above all for the coming year plan so that your farm will be so far as possible independent of the results of war and the price of wheat.

FAIRLY CREDITABLE.

If the late lamented legislature was not notably excellent, certainly it was far from being bad. In fact, what we take into account the undeniable fact that the general condition of the country, necessitating economy, barred the way to constructive projects, the legislative record appears distinctly creditable.

As Governor Withycombe stated when he signed the prohibition bill, that one piece of legislation alone, at least from the majority standpoint of the prohibitionists, was worth the cost of the session. The ratification of the lake lease was constructive and greatly worth while. The compensation law has been amended, the election laws bettered. Real economy has been effected. Best of all, perhaps, there has been no drastic legislation, no freak laws; business has been given a fair deal, and nothing blatantly contrary to the public interest has been slipped through. Even if Central Oregon did not get its irrigation appropriation, we may admit that the legislature did its best, under the circumstances, and that its record is reasonably satisfactory.

What is probably the biggest piece of constructive legislation at the 1915 session was the ratification of the lease of Summer and Abert lakes. At least, upon that action hinged what promises to be important development of this country. At the 1913 session the big constructive bill was the Tumalo act. It is worth noting that Vernon A. Forbes framed both bills, and it is due to his hard work and ability that each one passed.

Speaking of the European war zone, the Albany Journal says: "It is to be regretted that all those trenches could not be dug in a region that needs irrigation." But even with their many ditches and their abundance of water we of Central Oregon are not envious, despite our $450,000 disappointment. It is better to be happily alive in the sunshine than unhappy in a water-logged trench.

The post mortem experts who are discussing the deeds and misdeeds of the legislature complain because consideration of bills was left until the last day. But they seem to forget that there has to be a last day. Their contention resembles that of the man who recommended that rear-end collisions on railroads could be averted if trains never carry a rear car.

The Bulletin has been asked to report to the United States Weather Bureau the occurrence of earthquakes in this vicinity. If you have one please let us know.

After the prohibition bill goes into effect there will be even more dry farmers and water users.

All flour is self-rising these days, at least so far as the price is concerned.

Bend continues to get her share of recognition.

HAS WITHYCOMBE'S PEN.

The proud possessor of the pen with which Governor Withycombe signed the Forbes bill ratifying the Summer and Abert lakes lease to Jason Moore, T. S. McKinney, passed through Bend on Saturday on his return to his home at Silver Lake. Mr. McKinney is the president of the Silver Lake Water Users' Association and has been in Salem working for the passage of the bill. As a result of the action of the legislature Mr. McKinney said that the people in his section expect to see the railroad extended to the lakes and they are therefore much pleased to have the lease ratified.

A. VANDEVERT ENTERTAINS.

A week-end party was given by Arthur Vandever Saturday, February 20, in honor of the Senior class of the high school at his home, twenty miles up the river from Bend. A very delightful time was had. A large feast was prepared by the hosts' brothers, William and George. It being the most enjoyable affair of the trip. Mr. Vandever told some reminiscences of Mexico and Arizona in the evening. Considering the number of lads and lassies the chaperon, Mrs. E. F. Stockwell had under her charge, her management was nothing short of marvelous. Although the guests were feeling the effects of their strenuous amusements on Monday, they are willing, without exception to try it all over again at any time. Those that went on the trip were: Mrs. Stockwell, chaperon, Ruth Caldwell, Hazel Thorson, Margaret Thompson, Genevieve Gerrish, Marie Fox, Mary Hubbard, Arthur Vandever, Lloyd Kelley, LeRoy Fox, Robert Innes, Hugh Thompson and Ralph Lucas.

A Woman's Strategy.

"I once heard of a sadly henpecked man who made friends with a mouse, and by keeping the little animal always about him he contrived to get the upper hand."

"A strange story. How long did that state of affairs continue?"
"Only a short while. The man's wife introduced a cat, and the moment the cat pounced on the mouse she pounced on her husband." — Birmingham Age Herald.

Getting Along.

"Lemme see, how did he four dunch ter?"
"I always have to stop and think anyway, she must be getting on. Yesterday I heard her contemptuously refer to the youngsters at a nearby preparatory school as a parcel of little boys." — Cleveland Plain Dealer.

Care Required.

"Good heavens," said the impatient friend, "are you writing yet? Does it take four pages to tell her you will see her tomorrow night?"
"No," said the weary writer, "but it takes eight pages to tell her I can't!" — New York Times.

Tight.

"He's close fitted, isn't he?"
"I should say he is. Why, man, he won't even give up out of his hand habits!" — Detroit Free Press.

WHY RIVERS OVERFLOW.

Some Streams Make Their Beds Too Small For Flood Tides.

"A river is not made to order. It is nothing more nor less than the accidental path made by water in following the line of least resistance," writes Arthur E. Morgan in an article on "Why Rivers Overflow," published in the Scientific American. Mr. Morgan goes on to show that the average river has found or made a channel that suffices for it in ordinary times, but that in flood tide is not large enough to carry off the water. Some of the figures he gives explain perfectly why certain rivers are in the habit of overflowing.

The Coldwater river, where it enters the flat lands from the hills in northern Mississippi, has a capacity of ten cubic feet per second when full to the top of its banks. At maximum flood, however, 100,000 cubic feet per second pour down it, and it has to overflow. The St. Francis river on the boundary between Arkansas and Missouri can take care of from 500 to 1,000 cubic feet per second, but in flood time it has 100,000, and the surplus must overflow. The Miami river in Ohio has a normal capacity, varying at different points from 6 per cent to 5 per cent of its maximum overflow. The Mississippi near the mouth of the Red river, has a normal flow of 200,000 cubic feet a second; when full to the top of its banks it can carry about 1,000,000 cubic feet. When all its tributaries are in flood it has to carry 2,500,000 cubic feet a second. As its banks are higher than the surrounding plains, these inevitably receive the overflow.

Homemade Silver Polish.

To make the best silver polish and cleaner known, take a bottle of ammonia as sold in most grocery stores, and to this add two ounces of whiting, and just a few drops of oxalic acid. In this way you will procure for the expenditure of 15 cents as much of the best silver polish as can be purchased for $1 in most of the prominent drug stores. This same polish is so cheap when homemade that the housewife will not find it too expensive to use in polishing all of the cutlery and also the brass doorknobs or any other bright metal fixtures about the house. — National Magazine.
