PERSONAL EFFICIENCY.

The secret of commercial success is efficient management and efficient management is founded upon the individual efficiency of the human units involved.

Not only the profitable operation of the commercial enterprise depends upon efficiency; the success of each individual employee is based solely upon his own personal efficiency.

The most interesting project of the kind we have encountered is contained in a "personal efficiency test" recently sent to employees of the Union Pacific railway.

For our own information and welfare we all of us may profitably set down answers to the queries, and then try to strengthen the weak places disclosed.

Here are the questions: Do you like your work? Have you learned the best, quickest and easiest way of doing it?

Do you know where your greatest power lies? Have you a fixed goal in line with your supreme talent? Do you believe absolutely in your own future?

Do you get well and keep well? Can you be optimistic, and all circumstances? Do you realize which of your habits, thoughts or emotions make you inefficient?

Do you correct your own weakness; mental, financial, social or spiritual? Have you discovered which foods, baths and exercises increase your energy and heighten your mentality?

Do you breathe deeply and hold an erect posture? Is your sleep long and dreamless and refreshing, with your sleeping-room perfectly ventilated?

Do you drink three pints of pure water daily? Do you eat slowly, moderately, regularly? Is all your clothing made loose, to allow blood and nerves free play?

Are you independent, fearless, positive? Are you tactful, cautious, courteous? Have you secured the best possible advisers and associates? Are all your co-workers eager to help make your plans a success?

Do you work harder than anybody else in the business? Have you learned the science of planning your day ahead? Can you relax entirely in your leisure hours? Are you saving money systematically?

Do you enjoy art, music, literature, and the presence of little children? Does your highest ambition include some real service to humanity? Have you a great love in your life, to steady, cheer and empower you?

YEARS OF ACCOMPLISHMENT. The report of the O. A. C. Experiment Station, just issued, is of unusual value. The review of the college's activity in this direction is in itself notable, and the whole thing is especially interesting because the report is the work of James Withycombe, director of the station for 16 years and now Governor of Oregon.

The report again shows that Oregon truly has a "farmer governor," but in the very best sense of the word—a governor who understands, from a scientific standpoint, the agricultural needs and possibilities of his state.

The brief review of the agricultural accomplishments of the 16 years in which Dr. Withycombe was associated with the college is worth reading. Here it is: "In 1898 there were ten members of the Station staff; at this date there were forty-five. In 1898 there was the home station, with its five departments; now there are in addition to the home station seven branch stations and some twelve co-operative experimental plots, with nine departments."

"The total value of the agricultural products of the State in 1898 was less than thirty million dollars, while the total value of these products in 1913 was $139,586,275. "Dairying, during the past 16 years has shown a phenomenal growth in production, having increased in value from less than three million dollars to $18,425,000. Poultry has also shown a large increase in production; and the production of clover seed has grown from practically nothing to a crop valued at two million dollars.

Perhaps the most notable value of the Experiment Station work has been its influence for better agricultural and horticultural practices throughout the state, including its influence for better methods of handling live stock, especially the growing and fattening of swine.

"The demonstration work of the Station, showing improved methods of moisture conservation, has been worth millions of dollars to the farmers in the drier sections of the state. These demonstrations, in fact, have shown that lean years may be largely averted in dry-farming districts."

UP TO THE COUNTY.

As Governor Withycombe points out, it is highly desirable that counties east of the mountains take advantage of the new law which provides that the State will share the expense of exterminating rabbits if the county will co-operate. It is a wise law, and certainly Crook county should avail itself of the opportunity.

If this, or any other county will put up $250, a similar amount will be forthcoming from the state. The combined $500 is then devoted to combating the rabbit pest, which, it is estimated, may be expected to grow worse as the number of coyotes decreases. While it is possible that the $500 will not accomplish the extermination of the rabbits over a very large area, if this and neighboring counties utilize the fund and carry the work forward vigorously, it is fair to expect that a big start will be made. Certainly, with the aid of the Oregon Agricultural College—whose workers have won a merited reputation for efficiency—we can demonstrate the best methods of rabbit extermination and the continuance of the good work can be assured, along proper lines, either at county or individual expense.

It is to be hoped, therefore, that our Crook county court will see fit to take the matter up, and that the small appropriation necessary will be made. The plan is a good one, and if the State is ready to help us, we should be willing to help ourselves.

COUNTY ADOPTS SYSTEM

Court Will Hereafter Require Order for Goods With Bill. (Crook County Journal.)

The county court has devised a system of auditing claims that promises to put the business of the county in better shape than it has ever been.

In the future it will be necessary before any article is sold to the county for any purpose to have a signed order or requisition from an authorized official for the article or service. The system which is to be used is one which has been worked out by Commissioner Overturf, and it was readily agreed by the entire court that the system is a good one.

A copy of the original order will be kept and turned in to the court at their regular meetings and these together with the original order which must go to the court attached to the bill for merchandise or service will provide a complete checking system which will no doubt save the county thousands of dollars.
