

LAND HOLDINGS STOP NEW ROAD

LIVESTOCK COMPANY IS HINDRANCE

President Farrell of O-W. R. & N. Writes State Land Board of Effort to Get Tracts Subdivided to Justify New Road Building.

That railroad construction in Central Oregon will go forward if the state is successful in its suit against the Pacific Livestock Company is the suggestion contained in a letter from President J. D. Farrell of the O-W. R. & N. Co., to the State Land Board on file in Salem.

Mr. Farrell writes that in considering extensions in Central Oregon the company found that a large part of the most desirable land to be secured was owned by William Hanley, the Corbett estate and the Pacific Livestock Company. Both Mr. Hanley and the Corbetts stated their willingness to subdivide their holdings and sell them to actual settlers but the Pacific company refused to do so.

Mr. Farrell states in his letter: "In considering the railway development to and in Central Oregon, we are confronted with the vital condition that a limited number of corporations and individuals owned and controlled several hundred thousand acres of the most desirable land in that section of the state.

Line is Located. "Having previously surveyed and definitely located a main line westerly from Ontario to Odell, Oregon, together with numerous branches, all calculated efficiently to develop and serve the adjacent territory, and having previously expended several millions of dollars in actual construction and equipment of the easterly division of the surveys—a considerable mileage of which is in the Malheur canyon almost entirely destitute of local traffic—and contemplating the expenditure of many more millions necessary to advance construction along the system to surveys referred to, the situation was comprehensively presented to the chairman of the board of directors with a view to securing the funds required to continue the work, it being manifest no considerable settlement was possible if these large holdings were kept intact.

Mr. Farrell then states that he conferred with Messrs. Corbett and William Hanley, who assured him that their holdings would be subdivided and offered for sale to actual settlers. The same assurance, however, was not given by the Pacific Livestock company, which is the third great landholder of the Central Oregon country.

The letter then describes the interview between Mr. Farrell and an official of the Pacific company in San Francisco at which the refusal to sell was made.

In writing this letter Mr. Farrell was explaining that the railroad is not interested in the suit to oust the Pacific Livestock Company from lands alleged to have been secured from the state through fraud, but is citing for the guidance of the board the situation that is confronting the state in its endeavors to settle the country and secure the highest possible development.

Hanley Criticizes Company. William Hanley joins in the criticism of the Pacific company in the following interview in the Sunday Journal.

"Henry Miller, as head of the Pacific Livestock Co., was of the type that brings about results. He was probably the most efficient livestock man in the country. But he was a czar. He held the view that everything in sight was his, or would be if it were not for other people. 'Go get it' was his favorite order. And his men went and got it. Henry Miller and I have been at law for 25 years. Henry Miller knew the law and the small fellow, who attempted to encroach upon the empire of grazing land, did not know the law. That was Miller's advantage.

"The Harney county land office files are bulging with contest notices filed by the company. Every settler ran the gauntlet of Henry Miller's tactics. Contest proceedings against each. Is it a wonder that few survived?"

Latent Resources Unknown. Mr. Hanley declares the state of Oregon is as much a foreign land to the average citizen as Africa or Hindustan. It is because the people do not know the enormous latent resources that they do not hasten this development. It must come. Oregon has mountains of gypsum, the greatest soda beds in the world, probably oil and gas. Transportation must reach in, capital must follow, development then and then only can be accomplished.

Because of these factors, Mr. Hanley declares that he will continue his line of "going down the line" to the sage settlement. That is why he has been working for 20 years to take a road into the interior. Three horns touch the edge of this great March 24; two that thread the Deschutes and the line built guests of Mr. Ontario through the . After the to Riverton. The club Friday of only real tonnage miles between, held ment, he declares.

by the obstruction policy of the livestock company.

Are Half Whipped Now. "We've got them half whipped now," declared Mr. Hanley. "Public opinion is against the policy of monopoly of lands and water supply. The people are gradually awakening to realize that Portland must have this country tributary to it if it is to hold its place among the cities of the Pacific coast. Portland's back country is too limited and it must be expanded. The open river and all the world has been made to signify will amount to little after all unless there is tonnage to use it.

"Sentiment must go farther, therefore, and insist that the Harney valley be developed by the construction of the railroad and the settlement that is to follow."

SEES FUTURE IN HIS HOMESTEAD

FRAME HAS MUCH IN CULTIVATION

Will Soon Seed 40 Acres as Demonstration Plot With Grains Furnished by Bend Commercial Club—Co. Agriculturist to Supervise.

A. T. Frame of Hampton, who is to conduct the largest of the three demonstration farms in the homestead country under the supervision of County Agriculturist Lovett, has secured part of the seed donated by the Commercial Club and is now preparing his land for seeding. Mr. Lovett expects to be at Hampton within a short time to aid in the seeding and start records to be kept by Mr. Frame for each kind of grain sown.

The Frame homestead of 220 acres has 200 acres cleared, of which 120 have been plowed this year, 70 acres of which will be cultivated as a demonstration farm, the seed for 40 acres being supplied by the Commercial Club. Last week Mr. Frame took out the rye and Early Haart Wheat, donated by the Bend Flour Mill Company, as well as the field pea and sweet clover seed. The barley and 60 day oat seed, secured from the Burns experiment station will be sent out as soon as the speltz and alfalfa seed arrives.

The 49 acre demonstration tract will be seeded as follows: Early Haart wheat, 14 acres; 60 day oats, 10 acres; speltz five acres; barley five acres; spring clover, one acre. The remaining 30 acres will be seeded by Mr. Frame to various crops, so that a good comparison may be had on the same place of different methods of planting.

Mr. Frame, who settled on his place in 1910, under the five year homestead law, is very optimistic about the future of the country. When interviewed last week he stated: "I have lived in various new countries, but my place looks better to me than any other new farming country I ever saw. If a man will clear his land as rapidly as he can afford to, and stay right with it, he cannot help but make good. I have two good wells on my place, so have plenty of water. I never saw dry farming country where the soil holds the moisture as well as it does here. Last year I sowed one acre of alfalfa, which made a growth of 18 inches the first year. A ton to the acre will make alfalfa a paying crop for us, and as soon as we can grow enough hay and forage crops so that we can winter 50 head of stock on each place, the future of the country will be assured."

They Know It's Safe. Parents who know from experience insist upon Foley's Honey and Tar Compound when buying a medicine for coughs, colds, croup and influenza. C. T. Lunceford, Washington, Ga., writes: "I have used it for six years and it never fails me for coughs and colds." Patterson Drug Co.—Adv.

The bore of a shotgun is determined by the circumference of any one of a given number of lead balls of equal weight, the total weight of which is one pound. For instance, the circumference of the barrel of a ten bore shotgun is equal to the circumference of any one of ten lead balls of equal weight the total weight of which is one pound. The caliber of a rifle is the diameter of the bore of its barrel measured in hundredths of an inch. The diameter of the bore of a .32 caliber rifle is thirty-two hundredths of an inch—thirty-two calibers.
