

FREIGHT BREAKS RECORDS.

Shipments of freight over the Hill lines to Bend have been making unusually fast time recently, two in particular, coming from different sections of the country, having broken all records. One of these, a carload of Fords, came through from Detroit in nine days, making an average running time of 34 miles per hour. J. T. Hardy, traveling freight and passenger agent of the Oregon Trunk, tells of the other shipment which came in here from San Francisco by the new steamships to Astoria in four days. The last boat trip on this line was made in under 29 hours.

George E. Aitken of Sisters, over the telephone, said that he had had no opportunity to interview others on the subject, but speaking for himself alone he thought the news a fine thing for the county.

Fred N. Wallace, manager of the Tumalo Project, spoke enthusiastically of the mill news. It means the absolute success of this project," he said, "for there will be a market for all we can raise. Congratulations."

number of others. The party spent two days here in investigation of the possible mill sites and in studying conditions in the woods. When they left, it is understood, they were enthusiastic over the lumbering possibilities and especially over the easy logging which can be done here.

Since that time further details have been worked out, including the purchase of the Rogers timber and, although there are still one or two details to be cared for, the matter is near enough to its conclusion to permit the present announcement to be made.

The heaviest interest in the new undertaking, aside from that of Mr. Shevlin, is held by Frank P. Hixon, of La Crosse, Wisconsin, and the name of the new company is Shevlin-Hixon Manufacturing Co.

Shevlin A Famous Athlete.

T. L. Shevlin is the only son of Thomas H. Shevlin, whose biography appears elsewhere in this paper. On his father's death in 1912 he succeeded to the management of his extensive timber interests, and is now the president of the Shevlin-Carpenter & Clarke Company of Minneapolis. Those who have had an opportunity to observe his development in the lumber business assert that his grasp of its problems and his knowledge of its conditions will serve to place him at the head of the industry in the United States.

The man who is best known the country over, however, is not T. L. Shevlin, the timberman, but "Tom" Shevlin, famous Yale athlete and football captain, the man who not only helped his team clean up the Harvard eleven for four years running, but came back after graduation, in a year when all hope was lost, and with a week's coaching put out a team that held Harvard to a scoreless tie. This was in a year when the chief coaching had been done by others and the team was in a hole. Shevlin was sent for and came with the "Minnesota shift" with which Yale kept Harvard from victory.

"Tom" Shevlin entered Yale with the class of 1906. In his freshman year he played on the varsity eleven and in each succeeding year, being captain of the 1905 team. Considered to be one of the greatest ends that ever played football he was more than once selected by Walter Camp as an All-American star. No one who ever saw him play will forget the ease with which he broke up interference, nor the incredible speed, with which for a man of his weight, he went down the field at the kick-off or under a punt.

As a field athlete, also, "Tom" Shevlin was noted, winning many points for Yale in the hammer throw against Harvard and in the intercollegiate games. He has visited Bend more than once, the last trip as already stated, being last month in company with experts to plan for the coming mill.

Mr. Hixon is a prominent banker of La Crosse and has frequently been identified with the Shevlin timber interests.

JOHN E. RYAN

JOHN E. RYAN Deschutes Timber Expert

Reprinted from The Bulletin extra issued Monday morning, May 10. The man to whom a large measure of thanks can be given for the milling activity now announced for Bend is John E. Ryan.

Mr. Ryan came into Central Oregon in 1902 to investigate the holdings of the A. J. Dwyer Lumber Co., then in financial difficulties. As a result of his investigations the tract was purchased by S. S. Johnson and became the nucleus of the timber holdings of the Deschutes Lumber Co.

This company was originally owned by S. S. Johnson, George H. Prince, Frank M. Prince, Samuel Simpson and Kenneth Clark and Having seen to the acquisition of the timber lands for his company Mr. Ryan began to consider what was to be done with them—how they were to be milled and here he found a difficult situation to exist.

In the later purchasing periods all the companies had bought lands in any places where prices made the lands available and as a result holdings were scattered over large areas. In considering this fact and its effect on milling possibilities Mr. Ryan conceived the idea that exchanges might be made by the different owners, thereby consolidating the lands of each so that the cost of logging might be kept at a minimum for each operator.

To carry out his idea Mr. Ryan, in 1908 made an ownership map showing the different ownerships in different colors. He then made other maps showing his plan of exchange, blocking out the consolidated tracts in colors. These maps were worked out with great detail and were so carefully prepared that when Mr. Ryan submitted them to the other timber owners in 1913 no opposition was made to the exchanges he suggested and in the spring of 1914 they were consummated. Among other exchanges made at the time, the Deschutes Lumber Co. released all its Klamath and Lake lands to the Fremont Land Co., as did the Bend Timber Co., and consolidated their holdings to the west and south west of Bend. Other exchanges followed until today all the operators in the Deschutes valley have sold tracts of timber readily and economically worked.

In 1914, following this blocking of the timber, the Deschutes Timber Co., through Mr. Ryan, negotiated with the Weyerhaeuser Timber Co. for the sale of its lands. While negotiations were pending the deal fell through.

Then, in January of the present year, Mr. Ryan went to Minneapolis, sought out T. L. Shevlin and in two days closed the sale to him and associates of his company's lands.

Becoming associated with the new owners, Mr. Ryan returned to Bend and has since been actively at work on plans for milling. In April, largely on his advice, his company purchased the Bend Timber Company's timber near Bend.

Mr. Ryan was married in 1905 to Mary B. Norton, of Minneapolis.

Both Mr. and Mrs. Ryan are leading members of the local Catholic church and through their generosity enabled it, last year, to build an attractive parish house for the residence of its priests.
