

Preparing Farm Crop Specimens for Agricultural Show Exhibits

By County Agriculturist A. E. LOVETT.

Grain and Crop Specimens Prepared at the Right Time and in Right Manner Makes Best Exhibit.

There will be at least three agricultural fairs in Crook county this fall and it should be the ambition of every farmer to have an exhibit of his grains and other crops at each of these fairs. A good agricultural fair is of great value not only to the towns or localities in which they are held, but also to every farm and locality from which the exhibits are obtained. The man who wins a prize on any farm crop either has better land than his competitors or he has a better method of farming and preparing his exhibits. Practically none of the farm crops can be gathered only one or two weeks before the fair and made a Number 1 exhibit. Specimens must be gathered when in the right stage of growth, treated in a proper manner, and prepared properly to make the best exhibit. It will be only a short time until many of our grains and grasses particularly are ready to harvest in this section. Specimens for show purposes must be gathered either at or before the time of harvest. Garden and farm crops of all kinds must receive the same attention.

Grain for show purposes should be gathered when just starting to ripen. Single stalks may be selected from the field and gathered together into a bundle for exhibit, or a bundle or bunch of grain may be cut together and best specimens selected after the bundle or bunch has become cured. It is believed that some advantage is gained by dipping the butts of grain stalks in salt water or brine immediately after gathering. Tie the bundle or bunch securely at the butts and hang in a dark, cool place with heads down until cured. The grain will ripen somewhat after gathering, and it is believed that the brine in the straw will tend to prevent shattering of the grain in the head. After the sample has been cured, take it down, untie the bundle and strip the leaves from the straw. Lay the selected plants with heads even in a wooden form the size of the bundle desired. Show specimens of grain in bundles should be at least four inches in diameter. When the form is filled tie securely with cotton cloth or a ribbon and cut butts off square. Cover with a newspaper or sack and hang again in a dark, cool place until date of show. Grain samples treated in this manner will be clean and bright and if tied with dark ribbon usually make a very attractive exhibit.

Alfalfa or clover samples should be gathered at the time they will make the best showing. Take at once to a cool, dark place and hang with heads down until cured. Fruit must be gathered when a little under ripe and handled carefully in order not to bruise or break the skin. Peas, beans, and crops of this nature should be handled as advised for alfalfa and clover. Root crops can not be gathered until ripe, or nearly so. Care must be taken when harvesting for show purposes that the roots are not broken until the specimens are cured, and usually a better showing will be made if all roots not detracting from the appearance of the article are left on the specimen. Potatoes or other root crops, if gathered before ripe, will be injured by handling because of the tenderness of the skin; will usually shrink badly and will be scored low by the Judge of Exhibits. Where two or more specimens must be included in an exhibit, uniformity is one of the very necessary items for a successful exhibit. It is better to have all the specimens in the exhibit of the same size, color, shape, etc., even though this necessitates leaving out one or more especially good specimens, than to have an exhibit containing specimens not uniform.

We have had some very good exhibits at all of our fairs in this county in the past, but the number of exhibits in each class has been smaller than it should be. With the crops that we can grow in this section, it should require buildings three or four times as large as any we now have at any of our local fairs to hold these exhibits. Prepare a large number of exhibits for each class, so that if one exhibit is destroyed or injured another may be put in its place; or if more than one exhibit per person is allowed, you may be able to win not only first but also second and third prizes. I would suggest that every farmer in the county have one or more exhibits at all of our county fairs this fall. These fairs are valuable to all of us, but will prove of greatest value to those who take an active part in making them successful.
