THE LAURGAARD PLAN.

As we understand it, neither the company nor the settlers are especially well pleased with the conditions as they now exist on the Central Oregon Irrigation Company's segregation.

The company, which is by way of saying those who have invested in the project, has had no satisfactory returns in profits to date; in fact, there seems to be belief in some quarters that portions of the invested capital will never be regained.

The settlers have complained bitterly for years. Many of them have been treated badly; they distrust and dislike the personnel of the direct management of the project, they allege that maintenance monies have not been spent as they should, and they fear that the irrigation plant which they are to inherit in two years will physically be run down to a point of real danger.

In short, it seems reasonably fair to say that both sides to the present bargain are dissatisfied.

Now if a plan can be evolved which will return to the investors their money, plus a reasonable profit; and if such a scheme will give the management of the project to the settlers themselves, under safeguards and provisions of law, and with an added expense to those already purchasers or contractors, surely such a plan is worth investigation.

The Bulletin does not advocate the Laurgaard proposal. At present we know too little about it. It involves the biggest application of the district irrigation plan ever attempted, and its countless details, legal, physical and human, must be thrashed out before it can be proved workable, equitable and desirable. But we do sincerely advocate looking into the proposal immediately and thoroughly.

The district plan contains the possibility of pretty substantial satisfaction to both parties chiefly concerned. If it can be worked out here, the company should be content and the settlers will be. And, of course, anything which will rehabilitate the project, and the senseless bickerings of the past and give development an impetus, is devoutly to be welcomed by Bend and every other community connected with irrigation, and every settler, merchant, townsman, railroad and land owner is directly affected.

So, we say, the settlers would do well to take up the question actively. They should become familiar with its details.

Most of us know Mr. Laurgaard. He has had much to do with irrigation affairs, and he has made good with what he has undertaken. He really knows conditions as they are on the C. O. project. He is not a promoter. His interest in the matter is more or less impersonal, or, at least, properly professional. He probably has the respect of the irrigation officers, he certainly seems to enjoy the confidence of the state officials connected with irrigation, and his reputation is good with the settlers.

It would be a sound step to invite Mr. Laurgaard to appear before settlers and others interested to set forth the details of the district plan, as it might be applied here. If the settlers association does not see fit to inaugurate such a move, the Bend Commercial Club, as a convenience to the settlers, would do well to arrange for such a meeting and invite everyone interested to attend. Even at such a preliminary discussion it would be well to ask a representative of the settlers to state their tentative views, and also a representative of the company.

At the very worst, such a gathering and discussion would do no harm. And it might open the way to a very great deal of good for all concerned.

THE CENTRAL OREGON RAILROAD.

Under the above title The Oregon Country of Portland in its latest issue has the following to say concerning the proposed Strahorn railroads from Bend:

"The proposed new railroad in Central Oregon radiating in three directions from Bend is logical and will unquestionably become a reality in the near future. The sum involved in its construction is exceedingly small in comparison to its earning capacity. The fact that the man behind it is one of Oregon's real railroad builders—R. E. Strahorn—gives it the stamp of reliability. The business interests of the state cannot afford to overlook this latest move in their behalf.

"Every mile of railroad that is constructed means so much development and resultant cash in their pockets. We hear the same objections to this road that were manifest at the time other roads, long since huge successes, were contemplated. These are the bleats of the pessimist—and the pessimist in civil life is the coward in the army. Every encouragement should be given Mr. Strahorn and his associates. Oregon needs more railroads and the particular sections through which the proposed road is to traverse 'will blossom like the rose' when transportation will be at its door."

Apparently the women of California did not take a very lively interest in the recent election there. The women of the west must remember that if they do not use the franchise which has been given them it will argue against the granting of the ballot to their sisters in the east who are clamoring for it.

Why not have the Commercial Club invite Mr. Strahorn to come to Bend and tell us all about his plans at first hand, and let us know what we can do to help him? Bend never yet slept when opportunity was knocking at her door, and she will not now.

Even the young folks are talking it. The subject for debate at the high school today is: "Resolved, that the county seat should be moved from Prineville to Bend."

MILL ADDITION IS PLANNED.

The field lying between Riverside Drive and the river and south of Tumalo street is being platted by The Bend Company under the name of Mill addition. A number of houses are already under construction in the tract, and more will be begun at once. The plat will be presented to the county court for acceptance at its meeting tomorrow.

LOCAL PEOPLE PARTICIPATE.

Crook County was represented at the meeting of the Oregon Federated Women's Clubs at Salem last week by Mrs. Ada B. Millican of Millican and Mrs. J. B. Bell of Prineville. On the speaking program was G. P. Putnam who delivered a paper on the land grant and water power questions.

SALES NET GOOD SIZED SUMS.

A total of $153.90 was taken in by the sale of tags and other articles by the ladies of the Episcopal Guild for the maintenance of a bed at the Bend Hospital. Checks were received as follows: Reid & Horton, $2.50; Owl Pharmacy, $4; J. Sullivan, Brooks-Scanlon Co., Bend Park Co., The Bend Co., Bend Flour Mill Co., First National Bank, Deschutes State Bank and Shevlin-Hixon Co., $5 each. In addition J. Edward Larson has offered to have the Bend Steam Laundry do all laundry work connected with the maintenance of the bed. Tags for the sale were donated by The Bulletin. The ladies of the guild express their thanks to all who assisted in making their sale successful.

GOES TO WALLA WALLA.

Vernon L. Heathman, who has been held in the county jail at Prineville on a bad check charge, left last week for Walla Walla, in company with a Washington parole officer. He faces a charge of parole breaking in Washington and other more serious crimes.

BEND THEATRE IS SOLD

L. E. Dodgson of Rochester, N. Y. Makes Purchase.

The Bend Theatre, under the management of Catlow and Donnar, was sold last Thursday to L. E. Dodgson of Rochester, N. Y. Mr. Dodgson, who has had considerable experience in the moving picture business, took possession of the theatre Sunday night. It is the plan of the new proprietor to maintain the same run of pictures that the Bend Theatre goes have been witnessing, together with additional feature films which have had great runs in other places.

Several improvements are contemplated in the show house to bring it up to a standard with any in Central Oregon.
