Directly Paisley has been asked to provide a right-of-way for perhaps 25 miles on either side of town, north and south, and also to provide terminal grounds for a depot site, etc. This matter is practically settled. When asked to speak at the banquet last Thursday night, P. J. Brattain declared that he and his brother were ready to give a right-of-way through their property anywhere and that statement is typical of those made by all property owners whose lands may be crossed by the road.

A depot site will be provided in like manner and thus our problems in that line are already settled—Che-waucan Press.

In accordance with the announcement made by C. W. Riddell in Portland last week the new owners of the Pringle Falls Co., have started work on their plan to develop the resources of the Pringle Falls country and to reclaim the arid land in the La Pine Basin.

The land to be reclaimed by the company, amounting to about 250,000 acres, has been divided into units. The first unit, embracing 30,000 acres, will be irrigated in the spring as soon as the construction work on the power plant is finished.—La Pine Inter-Mountain.

Mr. Strahorn made it plain before the different audiences that the frontier townships would be made the permanent railroad towns wherever possible to do so, and that new township schemes would not be looked upon with any degree of favor. Lakeview, Paisley and Silver Lake will be made railroad towns, with the latter a junction point for two or more roads. Mr. Strahorn stated definitely that the old pioneers who have been struggling for years to make frontier towns should be treated fairly and squarely.—Silver Lake Leader.

With the development of the Pringle Falls water power and allied enterprises, the building of the proposed Strahorn railroads, and possibly extension of the Northern Pacific, the development of Abert and Summer lakes, and the many other propositions are promised for Central Oregon. Crescent should witness a wave of prosperity such as no other town in Central Oregon has ever had. With railroads coming into Crescent, sawmills will come, and with their coming our water power which is practically within the town limits will be developed. Our water power possibilities are not the largest in the state, but are sufficient to furnish power for several sawmills and factories. In addition there are other power possibilities within a few miles of Crescent that could be developed which would furnish power for all the mills and factories that will ever be located in this part of Central Oregon. It has been said that Central Oregon has a world of natural resources. All that is necessary is capital to develop them.—Crescent News.

Therefore it can be readily seen that irrigation means much to the farmer, the local merchants and the wholesalers. With water the farmer can make a far better living on much less land. He can then sell the balance of his holdings to others who will be glad to buy, and he can pocket the price, or pay for his water. The lack of water affects the individual, the community, the wholesalers, and retards population and progress. Those who are opposing irrigation are growing fewer every day.—Madras Pioneer.

The first Teachers' Institute of Jefferson county was held at Culver in the courthouse, November 17-19. The fifty or more teachers who gathered there were filled to the brim with inspiration, and what is better than inspiration, practical methods for getting good results. "Spread Eagle" oratory was conspicuous by its absence. Common sense, a strong democratic spirit and good fellowship prevailed.—Jefferson County Searchlight.

Two things could be plainly noticed at the Bend meeting of the Central Oregon Development League. One was that the minds of the delegates centered largely upon the irrigation question as never before. The other is the fact that the people of the state have been studying the irrigation district law and are preparing to form districts in the various localities.

The action which is being taken here in the formation of a district is but a part of the activity throughout the state along this line. People have awakened to the fact that those states which have had this law in operation have made the greatest advances along the line of irrigation. The petition which is being circulated is being signed by a large majority of the property owners in the area which has already been solicited. In certain large areas all have signed.—Deschutes Valley Tribune.

At a meeting of water users of the Central Oregon Irrigation Co., and business men of the city, held here

In Muma's hall last Friday afternoon to hear O. Laugaard outline his plans for organizing an irrigation district of the lands under the Central Oregon Irrigation Co's. segregation, J. W. Moore was elected chairman, and H. A. Schneider, secretary. After listening to Mr. Laugaard's remarks on the plan L. E. Smith, M. A. Lynch and Earl Benton were appointed a committee to confer with Mr. Laugaard and discuss points vital to the organization of a district and the committee was empowered to call a meeting of all the water users and farmers on the segregation to learn their views on the proposition of forming an irrigation district.—Redmond Spokesman.

Banquets were prepared for the party at Silver Lake, Paisley and Lakeview. At the latter place Mr. Strahorn announced another great surprise that was received with much enthusiasm. This was to the effect that the preliminary survey made by his engineers a few weeks ago in the territory north of Lakeview was now the final survey and asked the people there to make arrangements for the right-of-way. The entire right-of-way along this part of the line and the entire system is expected to be donated.—Fort Rock Times.

The committee which waited on Robert E. Strahorn at the Bend meeting last week was told that as soon as the land north of Prineville was under irrigation and the announcement came from Mr. Rogers that the timber in the Blue mountains is to be milled, that Mr. Strahorn is ready to take up the matter of the road to Prineville.

The timber will be milled in Prineville, commencing within the next 12 months without a doubt. We must and will irrigate the flat. Then it will be Mr. Strahorn's move.—Crook County Journal.

MARKET REPORT.
NORTH PORTLAND, Nov. 29.—North Portland cattle market took a sudden jump this morning, and went to $7.50 for best steers. The market is fully 30 to 35 cents higher for same quality stuff as last week. All offerings were sold and for the most part weighed before noon. The market has a strong tendency. Hogs not to be outdone by cattle put on a five cent advance this afternoon going to $6.15 and finishing steady. Eighty six hundred head went over the scales, the largest single day receipts ever marketed at North Portland. The ease with which they were absorbed was remarkable. All sheep lines are steady with but short supplies being marketed. Top lambs still are quoted at $7.50.
