

HAVING A GOOD TIME.

Young Persons Should Learn There is a Serious Side to Life.

Many young persons think of little about how they can have a good time. If there is work to do it is only something in the way to be got rid of as soon as possible, no matter how. They think they can live as the butterfly does when in its glory. To find something entertaining, to be amused, is all they think of.

This is natural, and it is well that they can look on the bright side of life. But they should know also that life is not all play. There are duties to be performed, and real happiness comes only after work well done. Happiness is not found when sought as the chief thing in life.

Entertainments cease to entertain. The clever companion does not please always unless there are sterling qualities of character back of the cleverness. Work is the blessing of mankind. There ought to be some earnest purpose, some worthy aim, in the heart of every one.

Live not for the present moment. Live to be and do. There are consequences to all our acts. Folly sown brings a bitter harvest which none can escape reaping. There are innocent joys to which all, especially the young, are entitled. But it should be learned that living to some worthy purpose brings the truest enjoyment.—Milwaukee Journal.

SAVED BY A HYMN.

Without Knowing It the Sentry Disarmed His Opponents.

In his book "Why Men Pray" Dr. Charles Lewis Slatery retells one of Henry Drummond's old stories to illustrate his point that prayer produces a sense of human fellowship.

"One Sunday night on an ocean steamer a man spoke of a hymn which had just been sung as having for him peculiarly sacred associations. He was in the Confederate army in the American war between the states and was ordered at one time to lonely sentry duty. As the night wore on he felt his danger, and to keep up his courage he began to sing—

Jesus, lover of my soul, and after uttering the great prayer of this hymn he was comforted and felt quite safe.

"A strange expression came over the face of a fellow passenger on the ship. 'I,' he said, 'was in the Union army that night and had been sent out with a party of scouts. We saw a solitary sentry, and my men had their rifles leveled to fire, but just then we heard the clear notes ringing out in the stillness—

Cover my defenseless head
With the shadow of thy wing, and I said: "Boys, lower your rifles.
We'll go home!"

Crossing the Dough.

"When I was a boy in South Yorkshire," says a correspondent of an English journal, "where most wives baked their own bread, the last thing before putting a 'kneading,' as the finished dough was termed, down by the fire to 'rise' was the two slashing cuts with a knife that made a cross. Then a piece of muslin was thrown over the top of the bowl. Where one wife would admit that the cross was 'to let the witch out,' another would say it was 'to help the dough to rise,' and a third would answer that it was 'just a fashion an' nowt else.' But if some trouble seeking boy had meddled with the cross and the baking turned out bad very seldom did the dough maker fail to put the blame on him for 'spoilin' th' cross.'"

Dangerous Talk.

A new arrival at a certain boarding house was a man who had taken part in a famous arctic exploration, and at dinner time he often regaled the other boarders with stories of his adventures.

"Yes," he said after one particularly thrilling description, "we were slowly starving to death. Just when things were at the last gasp one fellow had an idea. He cut up our boots and made soup of them, and—

"Hush! Hush!" hissed all the other boarders anxiously. "Don't let the landlady hear you!"—St. Louis Post-Dispatch.

His Own Hands.

A fashionable painter, noted for his prolific output, was discussing at a studio tea in New York a recent scandal in the picture trade.

"Look here, old man," said a noted etcher, "do you paint all your own pictures?"

"I do," the other answered hotly, "and with my own hands too."

"And what do you pay your hands?" the etcher inquired. "I'm thinking of starting an art factory myself."

A Fine Distinction.

A small boy in the village school when writing a composition on "Quakers" wound up by saying, "Quakers never quarrel, never get into a fight, never quarrel and never scratch." Then he added, "Paw is a Quaker, but I really don't think maw is."

The Adjutant Bird.

The adjutant or marmouset bird of India, which is valued on account of its feathers, will swallow a hare or a cat whole. It stands five feet high and has a fifteen foot expanse of wing.

Test.

"They seem to be in love."
"Yes. I really believe those two think as much of each other as they do of themselves."—Louisville Courier-Journal.

Controlling the Temper.

Good health is the first requisite of a good temper. All one knows or feels finds expression through the body. Thought, will, action, are all influenced by its condition. Whatever impairs the integrity of the body or disturbs the harmony of its wonderful organization creates discord for the whole being. Unpleasant feelings due to ill health are likely to produce corresponding unpleasantness of disposition. The disorder, if prolonged, results in a bad habit, thus becoming an element in individual character. Deranged digestion, vitiated blood and other impaired vital processes are at the foundation of much of the irritability, impatience, caprice, ill temper and so called naughtiness of childhood.—Good Health.

Ginger and Pepper.

Ginger was well known in England even before the Norman conquest, being often referred to in the Anglo-Saxon manuscripts of the eleventh century. It was very common in the thirteenth and fourteenth centuries, ranking next in value to pepper, which was then the commonest of all spices, costing on an average about 1s. 6d. a pound.—London Mail.

Complete Success.

"Somebody told Vanessa that if she would walk backward down the stairs she would see her intended."
"Did it work?"
"Completely. She fell down the stairs, and now she is engaged to the bright young doctor they called in."—St. Louis Post-Dispatch.

Negative Judgments.

Negative things often show positive traits. For example, it is fairly safe to judge a man by the company he keeps and by the things he does not say.—Youth's Companion.

From the evils sent by heaven there is deliverance: from the evils we bring upon ourselves there is no escape.—Iitsu Go Kyo.

J. W. McCULLOCH, CANDIDATE FOR THE REPUBLICAN NOMINATION FOR PUBLIC SERVICE COMMISSION FOR EASTERN OREGON.

About J. W. McCulloch. Born in Missouri in 1866; raised on a farm; completed public school course at the age of 15; attended college two years and began teaching country school at the age of 17; taught school in winters and worked on farm in summers until 1886, when he came to Oregon. Taught school in Oregon, and attended State Normal school at Monmouth, from which he graduated in 1889 as president of the class. Was principal of public schools at Stayton, Oregon, and afterward taught in Capital Business College at Salem. Passed Supreme Court examination for admission to the bar in 1894, and practiced law in Salem until 1900. Was elected member of Legislature from Marion county in 1898 and regular session of 1899. Came to eastern Oregon in 1900 and engaged in the practice of law in Grant county. Was elected district attorney for Grant, Harney and Malheur counties and served in that capacity from July, 1904, to January, 1913, since which time he has been engaged in the practice of law in Ontario, Oregon; has been connected with several business enterprises, in all of which he has displayed good business judgment. Is married. Family consists of wife and five children.

Testimonials.

I have known Mr. J. W. McCulloch since 1903, during which time he has been a successful practitioner of law in this district. His practice has been large and varied, and he has long been regarded as a leader of the bar in this county. His ability as a lawyer is unquestioned. In addition to his learning and ability as a lawyer he is possessed of a very sound clear judgment, as well as of rare common sense. He has a peculiar ability of making a sane, sound application of the principles of law to the facts of any case, enabling him to reach conclusions that are just and correct. He has had a wide experience in handling important business affairs, which has given him a comprehensive view and sound judgment in matters of business as well as of law. He is careful, considerate, fair, able and conscientious, and possesses just those qualifications which would make him a most excellent Commissioner of Public Utilities. Dalton Biggs, Circuit Judge, for Grant, Harney and Malheur counties.

I shall be pleased to extend my support and give my most hearty endorsement to J. W. McCulloch for Public Service Commissioner. The estimate I formed of him while District Attorney prompts my belief that he will make an efficient and painstaking official, should he be chosen to this position, which, I trust, will be the final result. J. I. Gault, Cashier, First National Bank of Burns, Oregon.

I want to say that no man in Eastern Oregon stands higher in the estimation of the public than J. W. McCulloch. He is one of our very best citizens. He is a good lawyer; has a good, clean mind, and is a safe, sound, logical thinker. I believe he is an ideal man for public service commissioner. The business interests of the country must have safe, sane, conservative men in these places and I know Mr. McCulloch is such a man. A. L. Coekrum, Pres. First National Bank of Ontario.—Adv.
