Getting Prepared

Within the last month we have made a personal visit to the stores of some of the leading clothiers and furnishers in the Northwest. This has been done with the view to ascertaining what men are buying this season and what they want.

This We Found Out

by coming in touch with men of all departments in the clothing business. We are taking their advice and, therefore, are prepared for the season's demands.

You will always find this store ready to give you the clothing service demanded. Keep your eye on our weekly arrivals in the very latest offerings in men's furnishings then watch the styles and you will be able to determine for yourself just how closely we are following the style advances in all lines.

UGH! WHAT WEATHER

Snow, Cold, Wind and May in Unusual Combination.

Although it is hardly safe to say anything to the effect that the weather is unusual it must be reported that it has been most unusual for the past five days. Newcomers who have experienced the weather of the past winter here and who are now shivering in the spring clothes are bound that the weather is never anything but unusual and that the boasted Central Oregon climate is all hot air, mixed with freezing nights and snowy, windy days.

Snowy. Yes. It has snowed here every day since Thursday. No one has had to get out runners and it has not been necessary to enforce the side walk cleaning ordinance, but there have been real snow squalls and on Tuesday morning early risers found the ground white with the fall of the night before. With it all there have been high winds, cold days, frosty nights—and when the sun peeped out a promise of spring.
