MORE MOORES' SUPPORT.

Farm papers, as well as metropolitan dailies and the publications of the smaller communities, are offering political advice to their readers in regard to the Secretary of State fight. Here is what the "Pacific Homestead," Oregon's biggest farm paper, has to say:

"The Pacific Homestead is in no sense a political newspaper. It is a farm paper. It has no political affiliations. But we feel that we should say the following words to our readers in the State of Oregon, men and women, who have registered as Republicans.

"Charles B. Moores is a candidate for the Republican nomination for the office of Secretary of State. He is opposed by Ben W. Olcott, who seeks re-election after serving six years.

"We believe that Mr. Moores should receive the support of all Republicans at the primaries next week. He is a man with a clean record, publicly and privately, who is exceptionally well qualified to fill the office to which he aspires with credit to himself and satisfaction to the public. Mr. Moores' long record for efficient service to the state and to the Republican party merits recognition.

"Friends of Mr. Olcott maintain that the Secretary of State's office has been well administered during his administration. But observers ask, 'Why should it not be?' The office cost has increased some 37 per cent in four years. There is a big force at ample salaries. The equipment is the best money can buy. And the office organization, practically as it stands today, was inherited by Mr. Olcott from his predecessor.

"Now Mr. Olcott seeks re-election. If he gets it, he will have been on the state payroll as Secretary for ten years and he will draw about $45,000.

"He is opposed to Mr. Moores. Contrasting the records of the two men, we feel that Mr. Moores deserves the support of Republicans at the primaries."

Cummins has come and gone, and Oregon is being deluged with Cummins publicity and praise. A barrel of money is being spent in Burton's behalf "getting him before the people." Both are estimable gentlemen. Either would make a creditable president. But there is another Republican candidate, by name Chas. E. Hughes. Not a dollar is being spent for him in the state. He has no campaign committee. He isn't even an announced candidate. Perhaps he won't accept the nomination if it is offered to him. And yet—well, of course it's risky to make political predictions, but at that we venture the opinion that when the ballots are counted more voters will be found to have placed their "X" beside the name of Hughes than any other candidate on the Republican primary ticket. George Harvey says "No one wants Hughes—but the people," and he comes pretty near hitting the nail where nails are meant to be hit, which is on the head.

There are 3,542 registered voters in Crook county this year. At the 1914 primary election there were 3,938. The greater registration then is accounted for by the fact that Jefferson county had not been cut off from Crook. That Crook's present registration is within 400 of that of 1914 is testimony to the growth that has taken place here in the past year. Crook County's Progressive registration has shrunk from 95 to 9 in two years, the Socialists have dropped from 162 to 94 and the Prohibitionists have fallen from 127 to 40. There is a slight increase in both the Republican and Democratic registration, the Republicans this year outnumbering the Democrats almost two to one—on paper.

Remember, it takes only about twenty minutes to cut down a tree and a hundred years or so to put it up again.

The uprising in prices has not yet been suppressed.

HUDSON INDORSES FORBES

Bend Banker Urges Silver Lake Support for Local Candidate.

The Silver Lake Leader in its latest issue prints the following indorsement of Vernon A. Forbes by C. S. Hudson, president of the First National Bank of Bend:

"Bend, Ore., May 8.—Silver Lake Leader, Silver Lake, Ore. Dear Sirs: I desire to confirm the verbal statement made to your representative a few days ago, that if Denton G. Bardick made the statement that I was supporting him in preference to Vernon A. Forbes for representative from this district, that said statements were absolutely untrue.

"Mr. Forbes has the unqualified support of practically every business man in Bend.

"We consider that by reason of his long experience as a lawyer and legislator, that he is as well qualified as any man in Oregon to represent this district in the coming legislature.

"He is prominently mentioned as Speaker of the next House, if re-elected.

"His wide acquaintance with all the men comprising the legislature in past years and many of whom will be in the coming legislature, together with his personal friendship with the Governor, state officials and the favorable opinion of the Portland press, will instantly enable him to command a following and support of any legislation he may champion, that a new man would be totally unable to secure.

"We feel that the Silver Lake community has a common interest with the Bend community in the proposed railroad and irrigation development that is promised for the next few years; that our problems are particularly mutual; the land is common ground.

"Mr. Forbes would have a personal interest in your community and its development.

"You will find that Bend, to a man, will stand solidly behind Vernon A. Forbes, and we trust your community will do likewise.

"Respectfully, C. S. HUDSON, President."

BEND'S CANDIDATE FOR SHERIFF

REPUBLICANS: MARK YOUR BALLOT FRIDAY FOR SHERIFF

57 X S. E. Roberts —Pol. Adv.

JAMES M. KYLE Republican Candidate for Nomination for Public Service Commissioner, Eastern Oregon District.

Encourage capital; regulate should it become oppressive. The Public Service Commission of the State of Oregon has power to regulate railways and public utilities subject only to revision by the courts. This power should be judiciously exercised so as to protect all of the interests of the people, and, at the same time, deal fairly and equitably with the corporations. I believe in a broad-gauge and liberal policy so as to induce more money and people to come to Oregon. Adv. JAMES M. KYLE.

line cuts through it. They see the opening of a rich country extending to the east and west of the town.

Paisley is Prosperous.

Paisley, by virtue of its age and diversified resources, will not depend so largely upon the road, but much of the resources which are now latent will be brought out for the development of one of the richest centers in Central Oregon. Paisley wants to get its products to the water line by rail and is confidently expecting something of a definite character within the next few months.

All of these communities, without an exception, appreciate, however, that a railroad will not grow alfalfa and grain. It is paramount that water must first be put on the land. Organization of irrigation districts and the promotion of projects of various types are now taking up considerable attention. At Silver Lake the settlers are to present a petition to their county court in July for the creation of a district immediately tributary to the town bordering the Silver Lake on the west. The district will embrace about 7,000 acres of rich bottom land which was one time the lake bed of Silver Lake. Gradual steps are being made on the Paisley project north of Paisley bordering on the south shore line of Summer lake. The area included in this project embraces about 12,000 acres of level lands. All of the interested persons in these projects are hopeful that funds may early be obtainable for the carrying out of the projects. Summer Lake Valley Rich. The Summer Lake valley, which lies about the shore line of Summer Lake, is a striking contrast to the semi-arid district lying to the north of it. Small, but highly cultivated farms touch the water line on the west side for more than 15 miles in length. These farms have substantially constructed homes upon them and permanent buildings for stock. There is every evidence of prosperity. The crops, now coming up, have a great stand in the rich black soil along the lake's edge. Fruit trees are in bloom in most of the orchards; gardens are up and are prospering; stock appears to have withstood the hard winter better than was expected. This valley drains a wide stretch of mountains to the south, from which flow hundreds of small streams which are utilized for irrigation purposes. In the vicinity of Paisley conditions, say the merchants, are good. The stockmen have had a favorable winter. Shearing is now in full progress and the clips are reported to be better in most cases than normal. The present prices being quoted for wool are not causing any pessimism. Merchants all report business to be better than usual and they look for a very favorable year. The roads between Bend and La Pine, and a portion of the stretch between La Pine and Fremont valley, give promise of duplicating the condition of last year. Already they are cut up and rough. Between the head of the Fremont valley and Paisley the main traveled highways are very
