"STRAYED; NO REWARD"

In The Bulletin office there is now nailed to the wall a copy of a Chicago mail order house's fat catalog. Some humorist has pasted across its cover three words printed in large black type, to-wit: "Strayed; no reward." Certainly that catalog did stray when it came to this paper! For it represents an invitation to someone in Bend to send dollars made in Bend back to Illinois, where, most probably, they will not purchase any more real value than they could right here at home.

The incident reminds us of the many instances when this paper has refused to accept advertising from mail order houses. The ads offered were legitimate and they meant real money. But they also meant direct encouragement to an industry harmful to this community. Especially they meant a species of competition which we regard as unfair to the local merchants, and as these merchants are the ones who chiefly support this paper, we feel that our first obligation is to them.

So The Bulletin doesn't take mail order advertising, and when mail order catalogs come to its office they have indeed strayed.

In the purchase of its new linotype, costing $4,000, The Bulletin is taking another long forward stride in developing its facilities. With the big new machine we will be able to handle every kind of work which may be expected here for a considerable period. From a newspaper standpoint we will be ready to produce anything which the town's growth justifies. And we are content to continue our policy of putting back into Bend, in the medium of a better and a bigger plant, all the profits which the business produces, and, in this instance, a very great deal more, too.

With a business in excess of that enjoyed by Eugene and The Dalles, both of which have Federal buildings to house their postoffices, Bend cannot long continue to care for its postal service in the present cramped quarters. The growth of the business has been rapid and constant and with our rapidly growing population increases may be expected for some time to come. The solution is a building erected and owned by the government which will provide quarters for the postoffice and offices for the other Federal employees who are stationed here. Senator Lane says we can get such a building if we go after it. Let's go.

Central Oregon farmers have had a good year. Wheat growers have experienced a real bonanza—big crops and high prices. Wool men have enjoyed another fine season. Cattle raisers have prospered. Demand for horses has never been so good. Last, and most important locally, demand and prices for pine lumber have been the very best, and the outlook was never brighter. Altogether, Central Oregon isn't such a bad place in which to live!

"Once more Crook county has refused to divide itself, but the goblin Bend will get Prineville yet if she don't watch out." This is from the Portland Journal and wrong, as usual.

In one respect at least the wish of the brewers will be granted; Oregon money will be kept at home.

The West Side Agricultural Fair Association will give a dance Friday night, November 24, in the agricultural hall at Tumalo. Eats will be served by the West Side Ladies.—Ad.

Dolls, Dolls, Dolls. Given away at the Thanksgiving eve Masquerade, November 29, at the Hippodrome.—Adv. 38c.
