WORLD NEWS Weekly

With the outlook for the allied forces against the Germanic powers the brightest since the entrance of the United States into the war, America has taken the most stupendous military move in the history of the nation. The passage of the army conscription bill calling for a total levy of 2,000,000 men in addition to those already volunteered, was clinched Friday night when President Wilson signed the measure, and announced June 5 as registration day in preparation for the draft. At the same time the President ordered a division of veterans under General John J. Pershing, accompanied by a regiment of marines, to join the allied army in France. The Roosevelt volunteer division plan is effectually eliminated.

A Russian coalition cabinet, representative of all elements of the nation has restored unity in the Slav empire, and serious thoughts of peace with Germany have been dropped, hostilities being resumed after more than a month of inactivity. Austria is being threatened by a brilliant Italian offensive in the Gorizia and Carso sections, the attacking troops rapidly nearing Trieste. Paris announces the arrival of a number of Japanese gunboats to aid in the warfare against the German submarines.

French Attack Brilliant

On the western front, the British troops made slight advances during the week, but were reported to be at a standstill last night. The French, in continued attacks, have taken all commanding points in the Ailette valley, and a tremendous strategic advantage was gained in the foresting of a gigantic German counter-offensive move. Great forces of the enemy had been massed ready for the attack with vast numbers of new guns and quantities of ammunition, when the French struck an unexpected blow, forcing the Germans back and averting possible defeat.

Other nations than the United States are rapidly showing new effects from the war in its latest phase. Brazil is on the very edge of declaring war on Germany, Honduras has severed diplomatic relations, and Hungary is reported to be leaning strongly toward peace. Serious food riots in Portugal are reported. Germany's latest peace terms, as far as can be learned, stipulate the retention of valuable coal and iron deposits in Belgium. Teutonic peace propaganda are being actively circulated.

U-Boat Solution Seen

Every effort is being made in Washington to solve the submarine problem, and it is announced that recent inventions are looked on with great favor by naval experts. As another important move, the War Department called three groups of militia into the federal service for July 15, July 25 and August 5. The second date named is the one which applies to Oregon. To finance war expenses, the Senate passed the greatest war budget in the history of the United States, carrying $342,000,000.

Miscellaneous legislation includes the introduction of the administration food control bill providing for a general survey of the nation's food resources, the recommendation for a downward revision of second class mail rates in the revenue bill, the 25 per cent increase of surtaxes in the same bill, the passage by the Senate of the bill authorizing the interstate commerce commission to limit the use of sleeping cars during the war, and the introduction of a bill by the labor department providing for the creation of an industrial adjustment commission as a strike preventive measure, and the federal trade commission petition urging government control of coal prices.

America's first women victims of the war, Mrs. Edith Ayels and Mrs. Helen Woods, Red Cross nurses, were killed Monday in a shell explosion on the armed steamer Mongolia. The government is investigating the cause of the explosion.

Although Mexico has protested against German submarine, and is thus seemingly aligned with the United States, a clash at Nogales between filibusterers and American troops was reported. The results were unimportant.

Chief among other happenings of general interest throughout the country, was the $3,000,000 residence fire in Atlanta, Georgia, and the burning of Eli Parsons, a negro, by a Potts Camp, Mississippi, mob, after he had confessed to the commission of a hideous crime.

Floods which were devastating the northwest early last week, particularly in the Spokane section, are subsiding rapidly, and it is believed that there may yet be time for rescuing the washed-out cities.

Early History is Recalled by Pioneer Soon to Leave

Within the near future, Central Oregon will lose one of her earliest settlers, when C. B. Allen, for 47 years a resident of this section, leaves with his wife on the first real vacation he has had in half a century. Mr. Allen has sold his stock and leased his 680-acre ranch in the fork of Big and Little rivers, and is now spending a few weeks in Bend, preparatory to touring the Willamette and Rogue River valleys, Portland and Grants Pass will be the chief objective points, and the duration of his stay is entirely problematical.

Mr. Allen was in a reminiscent mood last night, and related many interesting details of the early history of the county, for The Bulletin.

As a lad of 14, Mr. Allen came to Central Oregon. Bend was then a thing of the future, but "the bend" existed, and at times in his conversation, Mr. Allen would mention the Deschutes county seat in this way, when the habit of years got the better of him. For a number of years, Mr. Allen rode for cattle, and later ranged sheep, homesteading as soon as he reached the required age. Part of the original townsite of Bend was his property, and was sold by him to Stephen Staats.

To many in this section, county division is something comparatively recent, but to Mr. Allen, it is an old story. When he first acquired land in Central Oregon, his ranch was located in Wasco county, and any official business had to be transacted in The Dalles. Later, Crook county split off from the parent county, and lastly, Deschutes, the grandchild of Wasco, was formed.

No railroads, not even from The Dalles to Portland, were available when Mr. Allen came to this section, stockmen went to the Willamette valley, crossing the mountains to get supplies, although at times the trip was made by way of The Dalles. It was then that the old portage road at what is now Cascade Locks was in operation. Cattle were driven over the portage and re-shipped, but beavers for the eastern market were driven to Cheyenne overland, this trip sometimes taking an entire season.

Stock rustling caused some trouble for several years and lynch law became too common, Mr. Allen recalled. He himself was invited to join the vigilantes who took the law into their own hands, but was unwilling to associate himself with the self-constituted law givers.

Mr. Allen mentioned Marsh Aubrey, of Tumalo, as the only one now living whom he remembered as residing in this section when he first located in Central Oregon. "Anyone who wants to correct my statements can go to him for information," he declared.

KASPROWITZ CASE MAY BE ADJUSTED

(From Friday's Daily.)
Arrested yesterday on a charge of obtaining money under false pretenses, Mike Kasprowitz was released today on his own recognizance, and it is understood that settlement will be effected so that the case will not appear in Justice court. According to the complaint, filed by the Bend Flour Mill Company, Kasprowitz had given a bill of sale for a team of horses on which the company held a mortgage, to Dr. G. L. Cousineau.
