A MISTAKE.

(From Tuesday's Daily.)
 Ever since the selective draft act was passed an effort has been made to glorify the operation. President Wilson has urged that the registration be regarded as a patriotic duty, the War Department has asked that the registration day be a holiday and Governor Withycombe has called it one of solemn responsibility.

We agree. The measure is democratic. It will insure us the best possible army. It means that we shall be in the war as the American people, giving service when called upon, not merely as individuals volunteering as one emotion or another prompts. Because of this, which we believe the correct way to look upon the draft, it is wholly desirable that false ideas of duress and compulsion be removed and that the possibility of draft, instead of containing an element of shame, be thought only an honor.

That has been the whole purpose of the government in its discussion of the duties of today and what will follow, and it is exceedingly unfortunate, after such pains to create the proper sentiment have been taken that an effort should be made to secure volunteers by such notices as that reported in the news columns of this paper yesterday.

All honor to the volunteers. All honor to the men who are drafted. To wait for the draft is no dishonor, but it's cowardice to be driven into volunteering because of a fear of draft and it's a big mistake for recruiting agencies to make such use of the draft.

It may help recruiting, but it is bad for the operation of the conscription law and the way that law is regarded by the people.

(From Wednesday's Daily.)
 In line with what we tried to say yesterday concerning volunteering and the draft we call attention to two sentences from the newspaper reports of President Wilson's speech to the Confederate veterans in Washington yesterday. They are as follows:

"The significance of registration day was brought home when the President emphasized that the duty to serve and the privilege to serve falls on all alike.

"There is something fine about the spirit of volunteering, but bigger is the spirit of obligation," said the President."

(From Tuesday's Daily.)
 The people, by yesterday's vote, refused to make either the legislature or the penitentiary more attractive.

CORSETS

that insure the Very Latest Broadway Style, the most fashionable silhouette, without going to the extremes distasteful to American women.

Made from the finest materials, with the daintiest possible trimming. Fitted over living models to insure perfection of line, absolute fit and thorough comfort.

Double-boned with rust-proof boning, which insures each corset keeping its shape and giving the maximum of wear.

All this painstaking care, this extra value, is offered so that the wearers of our corsets get just a little more for their money than can be secured in other lines.

Because they are made especially for "women who care"—by manufacturers who care more.

Who go a little further each season in an effort to surpass the last year's record.

If you pay but one dollar, you will get an unmatched dollar's worth; if you fancy more expensive models you will find it hard to duplicate your choice at double the price.
