

News of the World in Brief

Whatever doubts may have existed as to the willingness of the people of the United States to aid in financing the war against Germany were swept away when the figures of the subscription for the two billion dollar Liberty Loan began to be collected last Friday. The total of the subscription has not yet been made known but it is stated by the Treasury Department that the over-subscription will amount to about eight hundred million dollars.

With the Liberty Loan campaign over, the country began this week on a drive to raise $100,000,000 for the support of the National Red Cross. Oregon's share of the total is $500,000 and already many sections have reported that their quota has been raised.

In a remarkable speech on Flag Day, President Wilson outlined the German plans for the domination of Europe, pointing out that as things stood today they were largely carried out. The military masters of the country, he said, would be glad to have the war stop now for when their present advantages are wrested away from them the German people will want to finish the job and set up a government accountable to them as have all the other great countries.

That Spain is in process of replacing monarchial with republican government is hinted at in messages which have sifted through the Spanish censor in the past few days. Details are lacking, but it is indicated that the anti-government forces, hitherto unable to unite, have finally joined hands in opposition to the pro-German ministry and court and taken charge of the government. Economic unrest is said to have contributed to the change. King Alfonso remains personally popular.

In Russia, the other foreign country where republican institutions have just been established, evidences multiply that the people are settling down after their first excesses following the gaining of their new freedom, and accepting the duties and responsibilities which attend the situation. A Swiss peace agitator has been expelled from the country with the approval of the council of Soldiers and Workmen, and Minister Kerensky has announced stringent regulations calculated to keep the army at the front. The American mission, headed by Elihu Root, has reached Petrograd, and has made a good impression and much headway, apparently, in its efforts to keep Russia aligned with the Allies.

A Russian commission to the United States has landed recently and is now in Washington. On the western fighting front, Marshal Haig has reported further slight gains in the region of Messines ridge. The British in return have had to relinquish advanced positions in the neighborhood of Laon. No further advances have been reported, but a tremendous artillery attack is now being made on the French lines as a forerunner, it is believed, of a German offensive. As a result of the Messines victory the value of air craft has been again demonstrated and measures are now being advanced to make the strongest effort of the United States in the air.

Submarine sinkings are on the increase, according to reports from England.

LOOKOUT STATIONS PLANNED

Difficulty in securing men for fire lookout stations is being experienced this summer at the Bend forestry office, according to W. G. Hastings, forestry supervisor.

Two new stations, one at the top of Batchelor Butte, and the other on Diamond Point, will be established as soon as men can be employed to take lookout posts. Telephone line construction will begin soon to the two new stations sites, one of which, Batchelor Butte, is only 20 miles from Bend.
