RECORDS MOVED TO THIS COUNTY

WARREN BROWN GIVES UP DOCUMENTS.

District Attorney De Armond Finds It Unnecessary to Institute Suit—Will Bring Books From Prineville Today.

(From Saturday's Daily)
The Deschutes county records, hitherto held by Warren Brown, clerk of Crook county, in his office in Prineville, refusing to turn them over to the new county, have finally been released today and are being brought to Bend this afternoon. A message to this effect was received late this afternoon from District Attorney De Armond who went to Prineville this morning to institute proceedings to obtain the records involved.

Clerk Brown having refused to turn the records over some time ago an opinion was sought from Attorney General Brown as to the statute passed by the last legislature intended to cover the situation. He advised that the books should be turned over and a demand was made on the Crook county clerk, which was refused. The Deschutes county court then instructed District Attorney De Armond to bring suit to obtain the records. Mr. De Armond has spent some time this week preparing the case and this morning went to Prineville to start things. That he was successful in doing so, appears from the fact that he has obtained the records and is bringing them back to Bend.

According to Mr. De Armond's telephone message, it was not necessary for him to file suit, an agreement being reached without taking court action.

much the boys here at camp appreciated the gift packages that were given them Christmas, by the American Red Cross of the northwest. Why you ought to have seen them, no two packages were alike, and the boys were showing each other what they got. If you people could have seen how happy they were, and the smiles, you would have been greatly repaid for your trouble. It is a great comfort to us soldier boys to know that the people all over the United States are with us in this great struggle. Great credit is due the women and the A. R. C. for making camp life as easy as possible for us boys, so far from our homes and loved ones. The people of the northwest have certainly worked their way into the hearts of the boys in camp.

"Our company was on rifle range shooting at targets some time ago, and the company as a whole made a pretty good record. We are now taking up bayonet work, as we have been taught that it is necessary to get the other fellow before he can get you, we boys are going to it with a will. Monday we were out building trenches similar to the ones they have in France. Tuesday we had some imaginary battles. Thursday afternoon we used the targets as imaginary enemies. We have 249 targets here in camp. Wednesday, we were out for a march over the pine clad hills around camp.

"This business of being a soldier is serious, and we boys are trying to learn all there is to learn, so in case we meet the actual enemy in France, why we will be on the job. We were right in entering the war, and right must win. Of course if we are sent to France, some of us may never return, but what's the difference? We will be giving our all to a just cause, because Liberty, Freedom and Democracy must rule the world in the future."
