SPRAY MATERIALS ARE SCARCE THIS YEAR

Growers Plan More Food Production
by Better Protection Rather Than Bigger Acreage

CORVALLIS, Ore., Mar. 4.—Attention of fruit and vegetable growers is called to the need for laying in a full supply of spray materials and equipment by Professor H. P. Brass of O. A. C. who has just returned from Washington where he met with the War Emergency Board of American Pathologists, of which he is the western commissioner.

On account of the farm labor shortage growers throughout the entire country are planning to make their increase in food production this year more through effective disease control than by increased acreage. Indications point to a great increase in careful spraying and seed treatment in all parts of the country.

Grave doubts as to the ability of spray manufacturers to meet the increased demands for chemicals and machinery unless orders are booked a long time in advance of the date of their probable use is expressed. This is the view of the manufacturers themselves, who are called to meet with the War Emergency Board in Washington. Early orders will afford a basis of estimating the probable demands for the season.

SUPERFLUITY SHOP TO GIVE COMMISSIONS

Articles will be sold on a commission basis at the Red Cross Superfluity Shop to open Friday in the little brick building adjoining the Deschutes hotel. Persons desiring to dispose of embroidered and crocheted articles, cooking or anything of this nature, may put them on sale in the shop. The money will be turned over to the owner with a small sum deducted as a commission, the latter to go to the Red Cross treasury.

TWO MEN GIVEN
PERMIT TO ENLIST

W. W. Woolrich and Walter E. Dawson, formerly employees of the American Bakery, but recently in Ell, Nevada, have been sent to Fort Fremont as part of the next draft quota from this county. At a request from the men, the local war board granted this permission. Both left here last July.

BIG CAMPAIGN
FOR SUBSCRIPTIONS

Enter the name of the lady whom you wish to secure one of these valuable awards in this campaign at once. She may win the grand prize. Better still, get the lady to enter her name and then vote for her. Those who get in on the start have the best chance of winning, so it is desirable that names be entered at once in order to get a good start. Candidates who enter the campaign do not necessarily have to be subscribers to The Bulletin. Enter your name and your friends will do the rest. You will be surprised to see how rapidly the votes will come in and what little effort is necessary to win one of the awards offered. Get in on the start and encourage your friends to vote for you. The rest will be easy. You will never know how popular you are until you enter a campaign of this kind.

From March 8, until April 12, 100,000 extra votes will be given for every $25 turned in on subscription payments. From April 15 to April 27, 90,000 extra votes will be given for every $25 turned in on subscription payments. From April 29 to May 9, 80,000 extra votes will be given for every $25 turned in on subscription payments.

An Argument
Indisputable

There is a gripping story of France—"France and the Future"—by Isaac F. Marcossion in the Saturday Evening Post, of February 9.

Mr. Marcossion reviews the changes which have been effected in France since a year ago when the American salesman who went there carrying a sample case was looked upon as a bird of prey, until today, when, arriving with a rifle in his hand, he is hailed as a deliverer. France—Industrial France—is awake today—awake to everything which leads to efficiency. Listen to this, from the story of Mr. Marcossion:

"Five years ago Andre Citroen was a manufacturer of gears in a small way. Born in Paris, he had graduated from a technical school, served a practical apprenticeship at the bench, and was just getting launched in business when the war broke out. He was a reservist and at once joined the colors. After the battle of the Marne, in which he fought, the French government suddenly woke up to the fact that it needed shells in immense quantities. The American supply had not begun to come in to any appreciable extent. What American ammunition did arrive was none too serviceable.

"Citroen knew the difficulties that confronted his government. He got a three days' leave of absence from his colonel, went to the war office in Paris, and said:

"If the government will give me a contract I will produce more shells than any individual in France."

"His argument prevailed. When you meet Citroen you realize how and why he persuaded the ordnance department to sign a contract with him at once for an output of 50,000 shells a day. He is a born salesman.

"Armed with his contract, Citroen borrowed a million francs from a bank. He then engaged the best shopman and the shrewdest practical financier he could find in France. He sent these two men to the United States—they could both speak English—with these instructions:

"Buy all the machinery you can lay hands on and get it on the water as soon as possible. If there is any delay in shipping the equipment to New York by freight, send it by express."

"This is the brand of talk that Harriman or Frick or Henry Ford might have indulged in when faced with such an emergency.

"We think we represent the last word in warfare work, but we are very much mistaken. At the Citroen factory there is a complete dental clinic, presided over by three graduate American dentists assisted by a dozen trained nurses, three of them from New York. Into this clinic at all hours of the day stream men and women workers, who are required to undergo a periodical examination of their teeth. All dental work is done at the expense of the company.

"I asked Citroen why he set up his dental establishment. Quick as a flash, he replied:

"Most of the human ills are due to bad digestion, and bad digestion, in turn, comes from lack of mastication. If your worker's teeth are in good shape he can chew and enjoy his food. When the eating machinery is in good repair the human being is much more fit. One of the best human investments I ever made was to take care of my employees' teeth."

The above remarkable statement came to the attention of Dr. A. C. Froom, manager of the King Bee Dentists, of this city, who said:

"Every word of that statement is literally true. If the Brooks-Scanlon and Shevlin-Hixon lumber companies of this city would have the teeth of their employees fixed at the cost of the company they would receive in an increased efficiency a hundred-fold on the investment. Mr. Citroen was awake to the needs of his employees, needs which when filled made them more efficient workmen and better citizens. If every person in the city of Bend today realized the importance of good teeth to health, cheerfulness and pep, the dentists of this city would be absolutely unable to fill the demands made upon them.

"The demands of the government upon the dental profession has been stupendous. They have taken a great many practical dentists from the ranks and practically every graduate dentist from the colleges to care for the teeth of the army of the United States, upon whom the democracy of the world depends.

"It is only a matter of time when the dentists of this city, as others, will be crowded by the demands made upon them by citizens who have been awakened to a personal realization of their needs along these lines, men and women who have been long neglecting this important factor in their health, and who are realizing by the example set by the government in the care of their employees, that there is no more important thing than the care of the teeth."

If the King Bee Dentists are unable to care for all of the people who desire to have their teeth attended to, Dr. Froom urges them to consult any of the reliable dentists in this city—Dr. Connarn, Dr. Faulkner, or Dr. Manning.

The King Bee Dentists have been doing their bit in contributions to the Y. M. C. A. and Red Cross drive and subscriptions to Liberty Loans, and they feel that they are doing a patriotic service in calling attention to the policy of Mr. Citroen in caring for the teeth of his employees and of the importance placed upon this vital question by the American government.

THE success of our country depends as much on your effort as on the best effort our Government can put forth. Are you doing your share by—

Cultivating every foot of land that is tillable, or

Raising all the livestock your land will support—sheep, cattle, horses, pigs, chickens,

Practicing economy, in your household and your business?

Economy is not "stinting"—simply "spending wisely" A bank account will help you to efficiency.
