

REVOLVING FUND PLAN APPROVED

STATE ENGINEER LEWIS ACCOMPLISHES MUCH OF INTEREST TO CENTRAL OREGON PROJECTS ON WASHINGTON TRIP.

SALEM, April 6.—(Special to The Bulletin.)—State Engineer Lewis has just returned from Washington, D. C., with considerable news of interest in the reclamation world. Probably the item of prime import to Central Oregon is the statement from the engineer that he secured the approval of Director Davis and Solicitor Will R. King of the reclamation service to the plan of using cooperative survey funds returned from the Ochoco and other projects as a revolving fund to bring available information relative to Oregon projects up to date. This will make approximately $7,500 available in such revolving fund for this work and there is now practically $100,000 of state and federal money invested in such surveys, the moneys to be repaid when the projects are built.

Purpose Explained.

The fact that one of the principal objects to establishing this revolving fund is to investigate the feasibility of the proposals made by the consulting board of engineers on the Tumalo project some time since, and also to secure a general survey of the plan broached at the Redmond water-masters' school not long ago by Mr. Lewis, for a gigantic 200,000 acre project in the Deschutes valley, makes this proposed revolving fund of double importance to that section of the state. Investigations also will probably be made on the Morson project at La Pine to ascertain the most feasible way of financing and completing it.

Mr. Lewis stated that he urged the necessity for speedy decision on the remaining patents for the Tumalo and Central Oregon irrigation projects which are hanging fire before the general land office and received assurances from the land office officials that all the speed possible in this direction would be exerted but he could secure no definite information as to just how soon these patents will issue. When they do come they will cover all of the remaining lands under the projects now considered feasible for patent, and what is covered will probably depend largely upon the amount of water available as shown in the Archibald report, which Mr. Lewis states is now in the hands of the department.

Other Possibilities.

Touching upon further irrigation possibilities, Mr. Lewis said: "Should the Chamberlain bill pass, which provides for loaning federal credit to irrigation districts, we will have our projects in shape to present without delay. Opinions seem divided on the early passage of this bill,

"Setting up work" puts him in fine condition. And what an appetite—and how good the little chews of Real Gravely does taste!

but those in touch with reclamation matters feel confident that an extensive irrigation and drainage program will in some way be undertaken by the federal government at the close of this war."

Mr. Lewis states that he secured adjustment of the claim of the Ochoco irrigation district with the reclamation service for $1,000. He also secured an advance copy of the regulations under the Smith bill and it is possible for irrigation districts to secure a lien on vacant government land within their boundaries upon compliance with such regulations. The Suttles Lake district, he states, has long been waiting the issuance of these regulations.

Approve Jordan Valley.

Among other important accomplishments which Mr. Lewis states were fruits of his trip to Washington was the securing of the approval of the general land office to the state's contract with the United States for the reclamation of 29,200 acres of land for the Jordan valley project in Malheur county.

It is probable that early steps will be taken relative to starting investigations on the Central Oregon and the Tumalo projects relative to developing the enlarged scheme for irrigation made necessary by the failure of the Tumalo reservoir and also considered necessary for giving to the Central Oregon country all of the birthright which nature intended it should have.
