

Chancellor Hertling's Peace Proposals, Like All Others, Seeks All-Hun Supremacy

BERNE, Aug. 7.—Chancellor Hertling, replying to questions in the reichstag recently, has avowed that Germany will continue to hold Belgium until the allied countries have paid his nation indemnities sufficiently great to cover Germany's expense of the war, and that the French must in turn renounce all claims to Alsace-Lorraine.

Other conditions of a peace treaty, the chancellor declared, are that the Brest treaty, entered into between the German and Austrian empires and Russia and Roumania, must be recognized by the allies, the treaty to remain as it is at the present without changes.

All German colonies must be restored, and the integrity of Germany and Austria must be reinstated among the nations of the world. A recognition of the German sphere of influence in Courland, Lithuania, Esthonia and Livonia is a further condition, with the Huns to have supreme power in settling the question of the future of Poland, the liberty of the seas and the renunciation of anti-German boycott after the war.

GERMAN PRESS HIDES TRUTH OF DEFEAT

(By United Press to The Bend Bulletin.)

LONDON, Aug. 7.—The German press continues to dope the public regarding the west front defeat. Some of the papers in an effort to cover up the reverses suffered by the kaiser's forces at the Marne are deliberately lying, while others are ignoring the events and playing up the minor news stories. Simultaneously, the alarm has been expressed over the growing strength of the allies in Siberia, ignoring the west front. The Tageblatt mentions extended gains in Albania, while the Voerwaerts declares there has been no major fighting on the west front.

SEES LITTLE IN ALHAMBRA

Writer Says Famous Building Expresses Mere Beauty, Without Any Sense of Power or Vigor.

The Alhambra is on the shoulder of a mountain. It overlooks the town, Bart Kennedy writes in the Wide World. It was built by the Moors, and I take it that it was built overlooking the town for the usual reason. The ruling Moors lived therein and they wished to be in a position to give the nonruling Moors "what for" when they became too critical. There is a lot of human nature in ruling people just as there is in ruled people. A beautiful place, this Alhambra. But to me its architecture expressed decadence and weakness. There was nothing strong or massive about it. Whether a race expresses truly its character in architecture or not is not for me to say. To be able to give a reliable opinion as to this would necessitate the living of a life that lasted through a couple of thousand years. But certainly the Alhambra did not suggest power and vigor. Beauty, yes, and also fancy, but nothing more.

But on the Cuesta de los Muertos (the hill of the dead), which was outside the actual palace of the Alhambra, were three massive square towers. They expressed strength. In them had lived—centuries before—the Mohammedan soldiers of the guard. These towers impressed me and I often went to see them in the moonlight, for then there seemed to be in their strength and power some weird effect.

HUNS' CHANCE HAS BEEN LOST

LLOYD GEORGE SAYS AMERICA'S ARMY IN SHORT WHILE WILL BE BUT SLIGHTLY SMALLER THAN THAT OF GERMANY.

(By United Press to The Bend Bulletin.)

LONDON, Aug. 7.—"The chance which was Germany's on March 21, when she launched her first offensive against the British, will never come again," Premier Lloyd George declared in the house of commons this afternoon. "The American army will soon be only slightly smaller than that of Germany."

"We all desire peace, but it must be a just and durable peace with power behind it to enforce it. I believe in a league of nations, but we must be careful of the conditions under which this league is established."

"Marshal Foch's counter stroke was the most brilliant in the annals of the war, when he drove the enemy back at a time when it had prepared itself for a lunge forward, but the danger is not yet over. Germany is still strong, her leaders ruthless."

"The tonnage of the British navy at the beginning of the war was but two and one-half million; it is now eight, and the navies of our allies have been doubled many times."

At the mention of General Foch's name the premier was compelled to stop by a burst of cheers which lasted for several minutes. His next statement brought forth another cheer: "Everyone knew of the courage of the American army, but its trained skill, and especially the ability of its officers, was beyond the expectation of any of us."

ROOM FOR MANY MILLIONS

Vast Spaces of Siberia That Have Yet to Be Surveyed and Exploited by Man.

The biggest and loneliest land on the globe is Siberia, of which at the present moment there is so much talk, says London Answers. Any one who would set about its conquest by invasion would find the task a herculean one, for it contains nearly five million square miles, and is about 45 times as big as the British Isles!

In these vast spaces there is a population less than London contains by a couple of millions, and there are hundreds of thousands of square miles of territory where no human being is to be seen. The mighty rivers of Siberia are almost rendered useless by the fact that they flow mostly into the Arctic ocean, and their lower courses are ice-bound during the greater part of the year, and their mouths are at all times very difficult of access. Arctic Siberia is a vast country in itself, but very inhospitable.

Siberia, it is said, is destined to be the granary of the world; and the opening of the railway across its entire breadth has certainly done much to develop its resources.

Burglars Dread a Noise. "Noise is the greatest enemy of the burglar and is what he most fears. Bear that in mind if you believe a thief has entered your home."

So says Frank McCarrick, lieutenant in Manhattan's downtown detective headquarters, whose long years in the police department give weight to his statements.

"The best of alarms in a household," he continued, "is a glass or chinaware pither or similar vessel. Slam it through the window and its crash above will be followed by another as the missile falls to the street or the areaway below."

"Never grapple with a midnight prowler, for he is prepared for such eventualities and has it on you. Generally no quail of conscience would come between him and murder if there was danger of his being caught."

National Prayer Days.

The first time the people of the United States were called upon to observe a day of national prayer was May 8, 1788, by proclamation of President John Adams. A controversy had arisen between this country and France and all Americans were called upon to pray for a continuation of peace. In 1815, when the United States was about to make war on Algiers, President Madison proclaimed a day of prayer. During the Civil war three presidential proclamations were issued appointing days of prayer for peace. In 1865 the authorities called upon the people to pray for Lincoln, and in 1881 President Arthur proclaimed a day of prayer to mark the burial of President Garfield. In the autumn of 1914 President Wilson issued his proclamation for prayers on "Peace Sundays."

Shoveling Out Gas.

Weighing considerably more than the atmosphere, the poisonous gases employed in modern warfare always seek lower levels. Thus the gas clouds penetrate trenches and deep dugouts, and in most cases it is a matter of many hours before they become sufficiently diluted with the atmosphere to permit of safe breathing. So the matter resolves itself into a problem of driving the poisonous fumes out of the trenches and underground shelters, or at least thinning them out until the air is again made safe.

For this reason American soldiers now in France literally "shovel" poisonous fumes out of their trenches. Attached to a shovel is a sort of canvas scoop or "flapper" which permits the men to heave the heavy gases over the parapets and beat the fumes and dissipate them in the surrounding air.—Scientific American.

Not Dangerous.

"While you were out west did you meet with any typical bad men?" "I should say so! I spent a week in a camp full of the toughest customers you ever saw—real cowboys who spent most of their time firing pistols and careering on their bronchos at break-neck speed."

"Didn't you tremble for your life?" "I was a trifle uneasy at first, but when I saw how a motion picture director bullied those fellows I plucked up considerable courage."

Our country wants its young men morally, mentally and physically fit. Mt. Angel College, St. Benedict, Ore. Address Rev. E. L. Meier.—Adv.23.

PRISON BREAKS ARE NUMEROUS

or two about Charley. He has an Irish name, but he doesn't drink whiskey and he hasn't an Irish mug. He has the most kindly features one would care to light upon, and a heart as big as a captive balloon. He had it doped out that the convicts were more or less human, and that if you treated them half white they would come through and play fifty-fifty. So he started in with the honor system again, and with the trustees' gangs and all of the schemes which the more or less sentimental have been advocating. For awhile that worked out well, too.

Then They Left.

Then the men began to leave. They left singly, in pairs, in droves. They left morning, night and noon, and they were being chased up hill and down dale by sheriffs, cops, guards, state police, constables and what not. Some of them were caught and a lot of them were not. But this mainly happened after the war had started, and there is partially a reason for it. The war brought heavy demands for labor and as a consequence the governor has been paroling and pardoning every man jack of the convicts who could possibly be figured as counting in the labor machine that is to help to produce and consequently to help win the war. The result has been a prison full of hard boiled convicts that would scare the Hun army to death if they happened to meet face to face in any kind of an alley, dark or light. This gang of bruisers, thugs, sneak thieves, petty larcenists and the scum of the desert and the green has been spending its time figuring up ways and means to beat the prison authorities and they have been doing it right merrily.

Charley Murphy has fallen down lately because he has been trusting to the honor of too many cons who haven't as much honor as the kaiser.

The governor is now planning on putting through some scheme to get the prison back on something like the old basis. He doesn't blame Charley Murphy particularly, because he realizes that Murphy has a big heart and big ideas, and that he has felt that convicts are more or less men, with more or less human instincts. He has felt that a convict, if treated properly, would come back and play square. But with the gang out there now it can't be done. At least that is the way it is beginning to look and undoubtedly the old order will change.

Believes in a Change.

The governor believes that it should change and if he says so it probably will, as he has the complete charge of the situation out at the prison.

It must be remembered, incidentally—and that is one of Murphy's alibis and there is a great deal to it—that the prison buildings themselves are rotten to the core. They couldn't keep a good live bunch from a military academy inside, if said bunch saw a flock from the female seminary going down the street alongside the outer walls. It has been demonstrated that the prison bars can be sawed through by a saw made out of a soft case knife. And to be real just to the convicts it might be said that no decent, self-respecting convict would care to stay in such holes as some portions of the Oregon state penitentiary now are. The cells are dirty and filthy, regardless of constant scrubbing. The walls are alive with the must of ages, and all in all the prison is not an attractive place. And when you are surrounded by bars that can be cut with a soft case knife you can't always exactly blame the con if he takes a sneak. As there are always two points of view, that is probably the one taken by the con.

As it is, however, it is more than likely that the time will come when a convict is seen escaping he will be brought down by a bullet from a Krag-Jorgensen, and if the walls won't hold him perhaps bullets will.

But whatever happens, it seems apparent that if some change is not effected at the prison the result will be a wholesale break some day with very serious consequences. Governor Withycombe realizes this and it is probable steps will be taken to prevent it.

To Establish Industry.

One plan he has in view is the establishment of an industry inside of the walls which will keep the men busy there. This cannot be done without legislative enactment, however, and any radical changes may have to await the action of the legislature, which is six months away, and a whole lot of damage can be done in six months.

The consolidation commission expects to meet here August 13, at which time Prof. Matthews, government efficiency expert, who has been getting the dope ready for the commission, will make his report, which, with such alterations as are deemed essential by the committee, will be passed along to the next legislature. The possibilities of this report have been discussed at length in these columns before and apparently not much change has been decided upon in the general plan. How it will work out and how it will be received by the legislature remains to be seen.

The consolidation commission will be followed in two days by the meeting of the tax commission to pass on the needs of the state government with an end in view of finding out how much extra money will have to be voted by the people in light of the constitutional limitation. A large number of reports have been coming in and the increases in a large number of departments have either been nil, or not as large as was expected. This does not apply to the institutions, however, and at a long shot it seem probable that the people will be asked to vote on a tidy sum in addition to that allowed under the regular 6 per cent. limitation.
