BENJAMIN FRANKLIN AND THRIFT.

Franklin's thrift slogans will have a prominent part in the exercises that are to be held by the more than 150,000 War Savings societies in schools, libraries, theatres and other public places.

The government plans to make the present year's campaign perpetuate the habit of thrift begun through the pressure of war and thereby preserve one of the greatest benefits that has come to the people of America.

Among the Franklin sayings that have urged thrift since the early days of the republic are the following:

"If you would be wealthy, think of saving as well as getting."

"Look before, or you'll find yourself behind."

"All things are cheap to the saving, dear to the wasteful."

"Beware of small expenses; a small leak will sink a great ship."

"It is easier to suppress the first desire than to satisfy all that follow it."
