

BAIRD GROCERY CHANGES HANDS

R. M. SMITH & SON TAKE OVER BUSINESS FOR APPROXIMATELY $15,000—FORMER OWNER TO REMAIN IN BEND.

(From Monday's Daily.)
The purchase of the Baird grocery store by R. M. Smith and his son, Calvin Smith, was announced this morning by Mr. Smith. The new owners of the business are taking possession immediately. While the exact amount included in the deal was not given out, it is understood that the consideration is approximately $15,000.

Mr. Smith was formerly manager and part owner of the Reed-Smith clothing store in Bend, but disposed of his interests during the last year of the war. He stated this morning that no changes in the manner of handling the business built up by Mr. Baird would be made, but that every effort would be made to continue the policies of the former owner.

Mr. Baird, when interviewed today, announced that he has no plans for leaving this city. "I am preparing to engage in another line of business here," he said, "but am not quite ready to make a definite statement as to what this will be."

POISONOUS WEED KILLING CATTLE

Death Camas Believed Responsible for Losses—Simple Antidote Is Told to Farmers.

Cattle on the range are dying from the effects of eating a poisonous weed, according to R. A. Ward of the First National bank, who urges that all stockmen who have cattle out provide themselves with the necessary antidotes to save the lives of their cattle if poisoned.

The weed that is supposed to have been eaten by the cattle that have died is the death camas. The antidote is 30 grains of permanganate of potash in a pint of water. A physic such as Glauber's salts, or a strong emetic, is also recommended by Mr. Ward. The symptoms shown by an animal that is affected are frothing at the mouth and staggering.

To familiarize stockmen with the death camas, as well as other poisonous weeds to be found on the range, Mr. Ward has posted a picture of the different varieties in the lobby of the First National and he urges that a careful study of it be made.

600 RABBITS KILLED IN TERREBONNE DRIVE

Bend Sportsmen Invited to Attend Second Slaughtering of Long-Eared Pests Next Sunday.

(From Monday's Daily.)
Nearly 600 rabbits were killed in the course of a drive held yesterday morning and afternoon at Terrebonne was the report of Dr. J. C. Vandeventer, one of the Bend delegation of hunters who took part in the drive. Another drive will be held next Sunday, and the people of Terrebonne extend a general invitation to Bend sportsmen to attend.

No corral is being used in the drives this season, but the rabbits are swept into a limited area by hunters spread out in the shape of a huge "V," and shotguns complete the work.

An unusually large number of bunnies are reported in the Terrebonne country this year, and without the drives which are being planned crops would be seriously endangered, it is stated.
