HOME SERVICE.

Every now and then we hear of some real good that has come out of the war. Medical and surgical advances have been remarkable. The art of flying and the development of the aeroplane are scores of years ahead of where they would have been had there been no war. Scientific discoveries and inventions have been multiplied by the needs of warfare. The world is taking a new view of itself and its responsibilities.

In our little community we have seen nothing of the big discoveries and inventions, but, as a result of the war we are developing through the Home Service section of the Red Cross, a social service activity of real value, which should not be allowed to end with the ending of the Red Cross war work.

Originally designed to help the families of men who were serving in the army or navy, the Home Service section has been of great value to the discharged soldiers on their return to civil life. It has taken up the anti-tuberculosis work suggested for draftees, discharged because of their tendencies to this disease. Slowly its work has broadened until many in civil life, who had no direct connection with the war, have been reached and benefited by it, and as the war gets further into the past its greatest work will be of this nature.

The Red Cross began in an effort to alleviate human suffering. It has found a place in every American community because of the war. Every American community should see that its work continues after the war because the peace time opportunity for service will be almost as great as it was during the war.

In connection with the work in Bend it is fitting that recognition be given to the whole hearted, conscientious and sympathetic service given by the secretary of the Home Service section here. Mrs. Forbes' success with the work has shown what can be done and therefore the importance of continuing with it.

LET'S COOPERATE.

In an effort to improve sanitary conditions in the city, the health committee and the city physician have recently investigated a number of complaints and also made inspections on their own initiative. Where conditions have been found bad changes have been ordered, with the result that improvements have resulted.

The ideal arrangement would be frequent house to house inspections, assuring a visit to every residence in the city several times a year, preferably in the summer. But, unfortunately, funds to provide such work are lacking and the best that can be done is the sort of thing now being carried on.

Proceeding on the theory that the city health officials are remiss in their duty and even that they can be "bought" off from doing their work properly, a citizen has recently written the state board of health complaining of conditions here and naming a particular locality as needing attention especially. Unfortunately, however, the place named does not exist, the writer apparently having street names mixed so that it is impossible to locate it. That, though, is a minor detail. The writer of the letter, who refrained from signing it, can get the names right and the facts before the health officials if she wants to do so. If this is done we are confident that the necessary steps to remedy the condition will be taken.

Lacking funds for a health department, the people of the city have just one way to obtain improved conditions, and that is by cooperation with the unpaid health officials. They are not being bought by anyone interested in keeping the city in bad condition. Their own interests lie in making Bend a good place to live in. If someone has a complaint to make, let him make it. If he thinks the city officials are not doing their duty, let him complain to The Bulletin and we guarantee a thorough investigation and report. If desired, names will be withheld.

Let's cooperate to make Bend a healthful city.

APPRECIATION.

About the most pleasing thing in connection with the visit of the party of railroad officials here on Saturday was Director Ashton's sincere and warm hearted appreciation of the scenery and climate, the fine air and the wonderful mountain view.

"Familiarity breeds contempt," according to the old saying, and although none of us are ever likely to look with any sort of contempt on these remarkable features of our country we do fall, through our constant association, to appreciate them at their true worth. For this reason it is worth while having someone like Mr. Ashton jog us up and tell us how really well off we are.

We are well off. Nature has favored us in every way. And there lies our great future—in a use of the gifts we have here.

Will some one of our poets or poets start something after the fashion of the old verse which told of the 10 little Indians? This time let him, or her, make it about the five little peace conferees who worked behind closed doors. The Jap got riled and then there were four. Four little peace guys dividing land and sea, Italy couldn't have Fiume and then there were three. Three little peace chaps started out anew, France lost her wish to hang old Bill, and then there were two. Two leading statesmen fighting over the moon; Lloyd George swallowed the 14 points and then there was only "Wilson, that's all."

The chap in Seattle who is ready to give a hat to the one who will prove to him that Bend has not a population of 10,000 will have an opportunity to buy a hat or say, "I told you so," when the Elks finish their census.

A man in Salem has directed that on his tombstone there be carved the fact that he built the first brewery in that town. The cemetery probably contains tombstones for a lot of other men who kept it going.

Everyone in Bend should familiarize himself with the exact location of the city camping ground in order that he may easily direct tourists to it.

Billy Sunday is hitting the ball for the Lord and Uncle Sam these days.

COMMUNICATIONS

Terrebonne, Oregon.
Editor Bend Bulletin, Bend, Oregon.

With your kind permission, I will accept your invitation to express my views regarding the issuance of bonds for the purpose of giving the C. O. I. Co. a $200,000 present. I agree with Ida C. Young as to the desirability of eliminating the C. O. I. Co. Also as to the uselessness of expecting any relief from the desert land board. But I do not agree with her plan of procedure. The C. O. I. Co. has little or no equity in the things that our district needs, and condemnation proceedings are the proper steps to take to get possession of the things we require.

The following is what I have always considered the proper things for the directors of the district to do, and they are the essential things that will have to be done, and some day they will be done. If the present board is unable to see it, other directors will take their places who will see it, and furthermore they will do it.

The first thing to be done is to discontinue the services of the present attorneys, then employ an attorney whenever they need one, and tell him what to do instead of paying an attorney to tell the members of the board what to do.

The second act should be to start condemnation proceedings against the company for possession of the ditches and their equity in a certain contract to deliver water to contracts Nos. 1 and 2.

The third act would be to restrain the C. O. I. Co. and the desert land board from any and all things that might be in the remotest way detrimental to the settlers' interests until the condemnation suit has been determined.

The fourth act would be to take immediate steps to establish the duty of water on the project as a whole and then secure an adjudication of the water of the Deschutes river.

These are the prime and essential steps to be taken. There is no other solution, and there never will be. We are not going to come across to the C. O. I. Co. until the courts decide the amount. Had these things been started when the board first organized we would have been a long way on our road out of the woods.

The sooner the C. O. I. Co., the district land board, the attorneys for the district, and the directors of the district realize that the settlers will never vote these bonds, and thereby ratify the contract, the sooner they can put their efforts to something perhaps worth while. That bond issue, that contract, the C. O. I. Co., the desert land board, and the record of our board of directors of the district and their attorneys are a joke. However, it has been and still is a costly one for the settlers. Still a joke, nevertheless.

Sincerely,
J. J. ELLINGER.

BICHLORIDE WILL GET RHIZOCTONIA

Best Method of Treating Seed to Prevent Disease in Potatoes Told by County Agriculturist.

(By the County Agriculturist).

The Deschutes valley potatoes have competed with potatoes from all over the west on our largest markets, and have not only measured up to the standards of these markets but have demanded a premium. This high standard of quality and of exceptional clean seed is jeopardized, to a certain extent by the spread of the disease Rhizoctonia. This disease in the first stage only injures the seedling quality of the potato. Its first appearance is in the form of rough russet colored area, which at first glance appears to be a spot of soil, but is easily recognized when the tuber is washed.

Such tubers, when used for seed produce healthy, normal plants, but about the second month the plants turn yellow, or pale green. This is due to the organisms attacking the main stem, and totally or partially destroying it just below the surface of the soil.

In other cases the young tubers are cut entirely off the main stem and a large growth of vine is produced but the yield is practically nothing.

The Deschutes Valley Potato Growers association, realizing the seriousness of this problem is co-operating with the county agent's office to secure a supply of corrosive sublimate at reasonable prices. In accordance arrangements have been made with the Butler Drug company at Redmond to handle the drug in large quantities. It will be put up in 4, 8 and 16-ounce packages, at a cost of 20 cents per ounce, which is as reasonable a price as can be secured anywhere.

Use 4 ounces to each 50 gallons of water. Immerse the whole tuber for one and one half or two hours. As the solution deteriorates very rapidly never use the solution for more than four dippings.

Remember corrosive sublimate is a deadly poison and potatoes which have been treated must not be used for feeding stock.

L. L. Hooks Says His Troubles Are Over

Tanlac Built Him Up so He is Now Working Hard Every Day.

"When I weighed the other day I found I had gained thirty-five pounds, and that's only a part of what Tanlac has done for me," said L. L. Hooks of North Roswell, Ga., in relating his experience with Tanlac.

"I suffered from such an awful case of stomach trouble," he continued, "that I could hardly eat a thing and nothing tasted right. The little I forced down didn't give me any strength and at times I would almost choke from the gas that formed in my stomach. I was so weak and miserable I just couldn't do any work at all and was just about all in."

"I commenced to take Tanlac because I saw the good it was doing others, and I could feel all the difference in the world right from the start; it simply made me feel like a new man. My troubles are now over, it built me up wonderfully and I am working hard, using pick and shovel every day, and never have any more trouble with my stomach." Tanlac is sold in Bend by Owl Drug Co., in Sisters by George E. Aitken, and in Bend by Horton Drug Co.—Adv.

FIRE DEPARTMENT ORDERS UNIFORMS

(From Tuesday's Daily.)
Members of the Bend volunteer fire department, in regular meeting last night, placed an order for their uniforms and decided in favor of holding another firemen's ball in the near future. The date for the affair will be announced later.

A Clever Corset for Slender Figures

Women who have slim, girlish figures will be delighted with this Topless R & G. It is designed to mould the figure below the hips into slim lines of grace—at the same time leaving the upper part of the body free. This corset is made with elastic sides and inserts at back. Lightly boned throughout with the short front bones and free hips that are so delightfully comfortable. This model is just one of a wide variety of styles designed to suit all types of figures. Every R & G is fitted to a living model—that is why they give such wonderful satisfaction.
