SOLDIER AID IS URGED AT CLUB MEETING

BAKER'S STAND GETS FULL ENDORSEMENT.

DELEGATES GUESTS

Vast Work of Red Cross During War and Program During Reconstruction Division Officials.

(From Friday's Daily.)

Red Cross officials from division headquarters at Seattle, after holding a brief session this morning, were guests at noon at the Bend Commercial club luncheon, and addresses throughout the meeting were directed particularly toward the work of the Red Cross and the problems arising out of the war.

In this connection, G. H. Baker, member of the Oregon land settlement commission, spoke on the measure which passed the last session of the Oregon legislature as the "Soldiers' Land Settlement Bill," and which, by the action of a majority of the members on the commission, has utterly disregarded the needs of the soldier, sailor or marine. Mr. Baker told of the plan for the establishment of model farms, costing in the neighborhood of $13,000, declared that the 50 per cent. payment demanded by the other members of the commission absolutely placed this out of reach of the returned service man, and maintained that the attitude of the commission indicated that there had never been any intention of aiding the returned soldier.

Club Endorses Stand.

R. S. Hamilton spoke on the same question, and H. J. Overturf, after declaring that the attitude taken by Mr. Baker is infinitely broader than that of the majority of the commission, moved that the club endorse his stand in the matter and invite an opposition member of the commission to appear before the club and discuss their matter before the state election June 3. The motion was unanimously carried.

Earl Kilpatrick, assistant manager for the northwest division of the Red Cross, following the luncheon, spoke highly in favor of Mr. Baker's stand, asserting that however much the rest of the commission might endeavor to suppress his ideas, the truth, as exemplified in the Bend man's ideals, would certainly prevail.

Red Cross Work Vast.

Mr. Kilpatrick was the first speaker at the luncheon, and in a masterly address sketched the work of the Red Cross before and during the war, and indicated the vast program still remaining before the organization. Interesting statistics showing that the American Red Cross has a membership of 20,000,000, that 8,000,000 women worked in producing 354,000,000 articles for relief of suffering abroad, and that of these 27,000,000, at a value of $4,000,000, were made in the northwest, were given. He told how in France and Italy the morale of the armies had been preserved by the Red Cross, how the populations of Serbia and Rumania had been saved by its work, and asserted that the vast organization is now the most potent factor in alleviating distress and checking the unrest which threatened the civilized world. He predicted that the world Red Cross organization which will follow the signing of the peace treaty will do more to insure a permanent peace than all the treaties ever made.

F. P. Folsie Is Speaker.

F. P. Folsie, division director of the home service department of the Red Cross, outlined the vast work of personal service, which is left to be done, and urged that the work be not left entirely to women, but that it be taken up by business men in order that it may gain in force.

At the conclusion of the luncheon, R. S. Hamilton, chairman of the Memorial day committee, asked that members working with him meet later in the afternoon with the Central Labor council, which has been working along this line, in order that the program to be arranged for May 30 may be truly representative of the entire city.
