TWO INFORMING THINGS.

To the student of advertising two very interesting and informing things have happened in the past year, the decrease of tourist travel to southern California and the increase of travel into the northwestern states of Oregon and Washington. Both conditions are easily explained.

In the pre-war days the attractions of southern California were widely advertised by the railroads. Chief among the visitors to that section were tourists from the eastern and middle western states. The railroads looked to them for their passenger traffic to the coast states, and to get it, advertised the country. In comparison little was done by the state itself, or by the cities. The railroads were left to do all the work.

Then came the war. The railroads were taken over by the government. All advertising stopped and slowly the tourist travel to California began to fall off. Of course, the war had some effect but it was not wholly responsible, as Californians themselves agree. The chief cause was the stopping of the advertising—the publicity—formerly given by the railroads.

In the northwest an opposite tendency has been observed. Here we have never depended on the railroads to advertise our tourist possibilities, so that the cessation of railroad advertising made little difference to us. But while California was getting no advertising the northwest, Oregon, Washington and British Columbia, was being "sold" to the country through the work of the Northwest Tourist association, maintained by appropriations from the two states and the province. And now the results are beginning to show.

National parks in Oregon and Washington had more tourist travel last year than ever before. Already this year more tourists are coming into this section than have ever been known and all indications now point to a year's business in excess of anything hoped for. New hotels are planned in several cities simply to care for the tourist travel developed by the association advertising.

In short, when the California advertising ceased the travel fell off; when the northwest advertising began the travel increased.

Draw your own conclusion.

THE LIBRARY.

We seem to be making progress toward a real library in Bend and it is about time that we did so. For years we have contented ourselves with about as miserable a makeshift for a library as there could be. What should have been one of the attractions of this town has been a subject for apology. We have called ourselves progressives, wide-awakes, live wires, and all the other booster names in the dictionary and we have given no attention whatever to one of the most important features of American community life—the public library.

No blame for the condition of our library is to be attached to the women who have had it in charge. Rather are they to be praised for obtaining even the results which they have obtained. They have been handicapped by indifference and lack of funds, eviction from the quarters occupied seemed more than once imminent, and yet in spite of difficulty, they have maintained a reading room and made it possible for the book hungry to satisfy their needs in some degree. The blame lies with us all in not organizing to get what Bend ought to have in the shape of a public library.

Now the goal seems in sight. A suitable site has been offered by The Bend Company, building funds may be obtained from the Carnegie Corporation, and the county and city officials are disposed to provide financial assistance through the coming budgets.

Let's make this the next step in the advancement of Deschutes county and Bend, the building here of a modern library for the service of the people of the city and county.

Portland papers are filled with advertisements of certain "bathing girls" who are appearing at a theater "in person." From the illustrations it seems that they appear in person and in not much else.

BOY SCOUT WEEK.

Boys are as gregarious—that is, literally, as fond of herding together—as their fathers are. Fathers have their lodges and clubs and pool rooms, and boys, unless their activities have been organized in some proper fashion, are likely to have their gangs. And gangs are likely to be the cause of mischief, if not of worse, making trouble for parents and neighbors and the community in general.

The Boy Scout movement is a recognition of the natural tendency of boys to band together and an effort to take advantage of the tendency and turn it to good account. Boys are taught things that they do not learn in school. They are given practical lessons in many arts which are almost bound to be helpful to them at some time in after life. They are taught cleanliness and manliness and loyalty. The effort is to make them into "good scouts."

This is Boy Scout week. If any of us do not know much about the organization we have an opportunity to learn. And we shall have an opportunity to help, each in a small way, toward the success of an organization of real value in the boy life of the town. We cannot make a better investment of our money. It will not buy anything more valuable than the proper development of our boys through the aid of the Boy Scout movement.

THE OLCOTT CASE.

A judicial body is ordinarily reluctant to pass upon a question which is not regularly before it. In deciding a case it may make a statement concerning a related point, and that statement, being unessential to the decision, is known as a dictum and is not a decision on the point.

The difficulty faced by the supreme court, in the Olcott case, seems to have been an unwillingness to decide a most important point by a mere dictum. The question before the court was whether or not Mr. Olcott could legally draw his salary as secretary of state and also a salary as governor. The question of his term as governor was not involved nor any question as to his right to resign as secretary, continue as governor and appoint a new secretary.

Two of the justices seem to have taken this view and to have ruled on the salary question only. Statements in the other opinions on the related subject are dicta. Possibly some way may be found to get the question squarely before the court, but Mr. Olcott would be perfectly safe in going at it in another way—that is, in putting the case up to the people by taking his chance on election next year.

ON THE CAMP GROUND.

The tourist camping ground is proving itself all, and even more than, its originators hoped. Already scores of travelers have taken advantage of its facilities and have gone on their way with a good word to say for Bend.

In spite of all that has been done to develop the site, however, there remain many things that could be done to advantage, things that would add very materially to the comfort of those using the spot and by that much more add to their kindly feelings for the town. A few brick ovens, for instance, would be inexpensive and yet would make the out-of-door cooking much easier. Simple tables and benches would be a great convenience and boxes for the storage of fuel, instead of letting it scatter all around, would add to the looks of the grounds.

Of course, none of these things is as important as the camp ground itself. But having provided that, it seems worth while to make it as comfortable and convenient as possible. A little more money will do a great deal. If the city cannot afford it, the Commercial club might well raise a small fund for the purpose. The results may be intangible and immediate returns small, but they will come.

Burleson has given up control of the wires. If he will only give up the post office department everybody will be satisfied.

Seattle had an earthquake shock. Now if Portland could only have something to shake it up.

By the calendar it is summer, but by the thermometer still in the vicinity of mid-winter.

Why go to Portland when we have a regular little Froze festival here every night.

Now for some good roads in Deschutes county.

How's your wood pile.

Put it in "THE BULLETIN."

Writes Treaty by Hand.

News dispatched from Paris reported the old tradition that treaties shall be written by hand survives, and that Joseph Carlo of the French ministry of foreign affairs, official calligrapher and painter, wrote the new peace treaty.

For 40 years the post of official illuminator in the French ministry of foreign affairs was held by M. Garapin, according to the Detroit News. He had one love in life—"the pen," to quote his own words, "this simple and marvelous instrument through which human thought is transcribed and forever preserved." One hate—"the vulgar and unesthetic typewriter, which prints without art pages that time will not respect."

Miners Appreciated Books.

Officials in charge of Iowa's circulating libraries were afraid to trust a set of books to the people in a certain Iowa mining district. They were afraid the books would not be cared for properly, and thought they could be placed where they would be used and appreciated more than in the mining town. Through the efforts of the home demonstration agent, however, one traveling library was sent to the community on trial. The demonstration agent interested the schoolboys, who made a case in which the books were placed. This small library led to much interest among the people of the town, and the demonstration agent reports that not a single book has been lost or destroyed.

A Great Objection.

"I don't take any stock in these 'ere patent medicines," asserted Lufe Lopp, a languid citizen of Wayover, behind. "They're an enemy to the human race. S'pose, now, you are getting along all right, unable to work 'cuz you're sick; you're pretty miserable, of course, but people sympathize with you and respect you. And then somebody persuades you to take a few bottles of So-and-So and you are cured and get your picture in the almanac. And forever afterward everybody wants to know why you don't go to work, dad-blame your ornery hide."—Country Gentleman.

No Chance of Relief.

Maria was a tender, sentimental little thing, but, to put it mildly, hardly a beauty. She was very fond of hubby, but exacted from him rather an undue amount of attention and service.

"Oh, George," she complained one night, "I don't believe you really love me! Tell me, would you feel it, dear if we were parted?"

"Eh—what's that?" said George, brightening up.

"I mean, if some one were to come and offer to take me away to a beautiful home and every loving care and all the rest that money could buy, how would you feel?"

"It won't happen," he answered, relapsing into moody silence.

Made a Hit.

Judge—You say this man was at the performance last night and that he took aim and fired an egg at you?

Actor—Yes, your honor.

Judge—And was it bad?

Actor—The egg was, your honor, but the aim was not.
