DESCHUTES FARMERS BUY COOPERATIVELY

Purchases Made in Quantity Through Local Merchant Allow for Large Saving.

The cooperative marketing being done by the Deschutes County Farm bureau is not by any means the least important of its many activities. The different projects fostered by the bureau all aim for one end—the promotion of better farming. The farm bureau therefore not only works for increased production and better quality, but for better ways of marketing these products and of buying things needed on the farm. This is being accomplished through cooperation.

Under the farm bureau plan all the farmers and farm organizations get together on both the buying and selling end of the market business. By bulk orders individual members of the bureau have been able to buy their necessities much cheaper than they could by buying individually. The latest purchase by the farm bureau has been a carload of wire. This includes all kinds of the woven and barbed wire and represents a saving of 30 per cent. to the members.

The order was handled by a local dealer and on account of the size of the order he was able to deliver it at a price much lower than he could if he had to carry the wire in stock and sell to each man as he came in. The Deschutes County Farm bureau owes its existence to, and will make any growth through, the cooperation of its members. But this cooperation does not exclude all other business and industry. Rather it is by cooperation with all other interests in the county that the bureau hopes to be of real service to the farming industry.

Welmer, Deschutes county rancher, who has a crop which will average 22 inches in spite of the unfavorable weather of the last two weeks. With an ordinary amount of sunshine, Mr. Welmer says, the first cutting would be stacked by now, as the frosts of two weeks ago cut off seven inches from the tops of the plants.
