LUMBER PRICES.

In view of the close relation which exists, or ought to exist, between the town and the local saw mills, it is altogether desirable that such questions as were brought up at the meeting of the Commercial club this noon be fairly and candidly answered.

Both Mr. Whisnant and Mr. Dehment expressed ideas as to the prices of lumber here, which have been current for some time. Those who heard the discussion this noon remain in doubt whether Bend lumber sells more cheaply elsewhere than in Bend, and it would seem to be worth while to clear up the doubt in the first place and in the second, if it does, to have everyone understand why.

Of course, a development of the whole subject would require, to begin with, that some agreement be reached as to how local prices should compare with others. The discussion this noon proceeded on the assumption that they ought to be lower, the "ought" representing the town viewpoint. The mills might answer that the town ought not to worry about the price of lumber any more than it does about the price of hardware or of printing.

It would be a fine thing and one which would create much good will toward the mills if the town could know that prices were lower here than elsewhere, however, or, if higher, that the reason lay in greater cost of handling, for instance, and was not a source of extra profit. We are all out to make what profit we can but not to make more out of our neighbor than anyone else.

So far as lumber is concerned we are sure that if the matter were fully explained there would be no cause for complaint.

We have an idea that the suggestion to remove the state capitol from Salem to Portland grew out of an idea to advertise Prineville rather than to punish Salem or reward Portland. Do you remember what a stir the Salem Commercial club secretary created when he wrote to all the other Salems asking them to change their name?

"Army sentences to be lightened when justified by facts," says a newspaper headline. Which suggests the question as to why any man is now serving a sentence not justified by the facts. This is what Senator Chamberlain is asking.

Public Now Told

All About Tanlac

Authorities Now Show Just What This Medicine Really Is.

In a recent issue of this paper announcement was made that Tanlac now has the largest sale of any medicine of its kind in the world, and that more than 12 million bottles had been sold in the past four years.

These are unusual figures and the question naturally arises in the mind of the reader why this phenomenal success, and why has this preparation so far outstripped all the other medicines of its kind. It is only natural therefor, that the manufacturers should offer some explanation to satisfy public interest.

In the first place Tanlac is manufactured in one of the largest and most elaborately equipped laboratories in this country. Its formula is purely ethical and complies with all national and state pure food and drug laws. Altogether there are ten ingredients in Tanlac, each of which is of recognized therapeutic value.

Many of these ingredients have been individually known and used since civilization first began and some of them have been used and prescribed by leading physicians everywhere, but until they were brought together in proper proportion and association, as in the Tanlac formula, humanity had not heretofore realized their full value and effect.

In referring to one of the most important ingredients of Tanlac, the Encyclopedia Britannica says: "It has long been the source of one of the most valuable tonic medicines that have ever been discovered." In referring to others of the general tonic drugs contained in Tanlac, the 13th edition of Pottinger's Therapeutics, a standard medical text book states that "they impart general tone and strength to the entire system, including all organs and tissues."

This same well known authority in describing the physiological action of still another of the ingredients of Tanlac, which is of value in treating what is known as a run down condition, uses the following expression: "It is highly esteemed in loss of appetite during convalescence from acute diseases." There are certain other elements in Tanlac which because of their influence upon the appetite, digestion, assimilation and elimination, improve the nutrition and vital activity of all the tissues and organs of the body, and promote the state of general tonic which is called health.

In discussing another ingredient the Encyclopedia Britannica says: "It is one of the most efficient of that class of substances which act upon the stomach so as to invigorate digestion and thereby increase the general nutrition. It is used in dyspepsia, chlorosis, anemia and various other diseases in which the tone of the stomach and alimentary canal is deficient." Concerning still another ingredient this same standard authority says: "It causes dilation of the gastric blood vessels, increases secretion of the gastric juice, and causes greater activity in the movements of the muscular layers in the walls of the stomach. It also tends to lessen the sensibility of the stomach, and so may relieve gastric pain."

The United States Dispensary

makes the following comment regarding another ingredient: "It may be used in all cases of pure debility of the digestive organs or where a general tonic impression is required. Dyspepsia, atonic gout, hysteria and intermittent fever are among the many affections in which it has proven useful." There are certain other ingredients described in the Dispensary and in other standard medical text books as having a beneficial action upon the organs of secretion, whose proper functioning results in the purification of the blood streams passing through them. In this manner objectionable and poisonous ingredients of the blood are removed, and the entire system is invigorated and vitalized.

Tanlac was designed primarily for the correction of disorders of the stomach, liver and bowels. At the same time, however, it is a powerful reconstructive tonic and body builder, for it naturally follows that any medicine that brings about proper assimilation of the food and the thorough elimination of the waste products must therefore have a far-reaching and most beneficial effect upon the entire system.

Although Tanlac's claims for supremacy are abundantly supported by the world's leading authorities, it is the people themselves who have really made Tanlac what it is. Millions upon millions have used it, and have told other millions what it has done for them. That is why Tanlac has become the real sensation of the drug trade in this country, and that is also why it is the most widely talked-of medicine in the world today.
