

VAST TIMBER BELT IS OPEN TO NEW LINE

45,000 ACRES OWNED BY HILL INTERESTS.

Logs Could Be More Efficiently Milled at Bend Than at Any Point on Proposed Road, Is Belief of Local Mep.

In the minds of local business men and timber holders, it is apparent why the proposed line of the Portland & Southeastern railroad is projected southeast from Hogg pass to Sisters and Gist and thence to Bend.

It has been authoritatively learned here that the Hill interests have approximately 45,000 acres of timber directly tributary to the proposed line, all of which is located on the east slope of the Cascade mountains. The proposed line extends through the heart of this timber for a distance of 47 miles. The breadth of the timber belt on the east slope is approximately 12 miles.

Huge Tract Tributary.
An estimate placed on the amount of timber represented is placed at 600 million feet, a great part of which is merchantable and tributary to the Deschutes river. It is estimated that other timber, including that owned by private interests and in the national forests directly tributary to the line, is five billion feet.

According to men well informed on the timber situation in Central Oregon, practically all of the Hill timber can be brought to the Deschutes river for milling more satisfactorily than at any other point along the proposed route of the Portland & Southeastern railroad.

Pigeon Finds Use When Phone Line To Bend Is Dead

The telephone strike had no terrors for William Sproat of the Deschutes national forest service. Instead of taking down the receiver and vainly attempting to get the attention of the missing "Central," Mr. Sproat, who is at East lake on special work for the forest, merely took a pigeon from his basket, slipped a note in the aluminum tube attached to the carrier's leg and turned the bird loose. Inside of 50 minutes the bird was in the cote at the Sproat home in Bend, and a few minutes later the "call" was received by Mrs. Sproat.

Hill is desirous of milling this timber, but there remains speculation as to the point he will conduct these operations. It is also felt that there may be some arrangement whereby the other timber interests, holding land tributary to the survey, may pool their timber with the view to general and extensive milling operations on the Deschutes river.

The haul from the summit presents no difficulties, it has been learned, but, rather, the conditions favor operations southeastward rather than northwestward over the pass.

Men who have traveled extensively in the Cascades say that the Hogg pass is the lowest point in the Cascade mountains over which a rail line might be constructed, and that the elevation at the highest point is no more than 4700 feet.

WORK IS RAPID ON NEW SCHOOL

BRICKLAYING ALMOST COMPLETED.

Construction in Kenwood Being Pushed by Contractors, and Will Be Finished Well Before Time Limit Elapses.

Rapid progress is being made on the construction of the new Kenwood school, and E. P. Brosterhouse, the contractor, will have the building finished well in advance of September 10, the date set for its completion, was the statement today of Frank Sutherland, superintendent of construction.

Seven bricklayers, under the direction of Al Friberg, have nearly reached the end of 270,000 bricks required in erecting the school, and will be through by Saturday evening.

Eight carpenters are being employed and the main part of the school construction remaining to be done will keep them in the west wing of the building. Work has already been started on the heating system by Finnog Bros., and the plant will be installed in advance of the completion of the main contract, it is expected.

Plans drawn by Architect Lee A. Thomas provides for eight class rooms and large assembly hall, with the basement devoted entirely to the steam plant.
