HIGHWAY OFFER PLEASES COURT

COMMISSION'S PROPOSITION ON BEND-REDMOND ROAD WILL BE ACCEPTED AS SOON AS PRESENTED, SAYS BARNES.

Just as soon as the proposition from the state highway commission, outlined Wednesday at the Commercial club meeting, is formally presented to the Deschutes county court, it will be quickly accepted, was the statement on Thursday of County Judge Barnes. The commission's offer, which was discussed yesterday, provides that the county shall grade that part of The Dalles-California highway lying between Bend and Redmond, at a cost of $60,000, and that the state will put on a macadam surface, to cost approximately $175,000.

As yet, the county court has only had the commission's offer second hand, and hence has been unable to make any final answer on it. The sentiment of the members, however, is entirely favorable, Judge Barnes says.

GILBERT LOSES ON A DECISION

MORRISSEY IS WINNER OF 10-ROUND GO.

Bend Fighter Goes to Mat for Count of Two in Seventh as Nearest Approach to Knockout— Woods Loses on Foul.

Outboxed by a more clever, shifter opponent, Fred Gilbert, of Bend, lost a 10 round go, the main event of the Labor Day smoker, to Lee Morrissey, of Seattle, on a referee's decision. The nearest thing to a knockout came in the seventh round, when the Seattle boy sent a left uppercut to his opponent's chin. Gilbert was on his feet again at the count of two, but it was the only time in the bout that either fighter was knocked off his feet, and was an important factor in giving Morrissey the decision.

Once before, in the third, Gilbert went to the mat but it was not the result of a punch, and rather because he was rushed off his feet by the aggressive Seattle boy.

The bout started in whirlwind style, and the first round could have been called nothing but a draw. Both endeavored to force the fighting, and Morrissey's clever blocking and his ability to cover up and then lash out viciously with either hand, made up for Gilbert's slight advantage in reach. It was this ability, displayed early in the battle, which apparently prevented Gilbert from gouging in, when at rare intervals a wide opening would be presented to him.

Seventh Is Disastrous.

The second round was a shade in Gilbert's favor, the Bend boy rushing the milling at a pace too fast for his adversary. Morrissey's advantage in the third, of literally smothering Gilbert to the mat, gave him the round, but Morrissey had a shade the better of it in the sixth, and took the seventh by knocking Gilbert off his feet just before the gong sounded.

Throughout the latter rounds, Gilbert incessantly jabbed his right into Morrissey's face, but the blows were ineffective. The eighth went to Morrissey, but in the ninth, he was apparently weakening, and Fred was quick to take advantage of this fact jabbing viciously to the head. Most of his punches were blocked, but the round was for the local fighter.

Morrissey showed up strong in the 10th, but it was the belief of many fans that if the fight could have gone for three rounds more, Gilbert's greater strength and endurance would have enabled him to score a knockout.

Willard Houston, the third man in the ring, was a most satisfactory referee.

Foul Wins for McConnell.

The main preliminary, was lost by Speck Woods on a foul, when the decision was securely within his grasp. Fighting against "Frisco" McConnell, Woods had floored him twice in the second round, and the second time he went to the mat he was so groggy that it was plain Speck needed only to select the time and place and then administer a sleeping potion. Too anxious to end the fight, however, he launched a vicious right at McConnell's chin as the latter was still on his hands and knees, at the count of six. Referee Stephenson promptly assisted McConnell to his feet, and raised his hand in token of victory.

Kid Taylor, of Bend, fought a brief, but aggressive battle in the first preliminary with Kid Gates, of Seattle. Gates took the count in one round.

Right Definition of a Classic.

A classic is properly a hook which maintains itself by virtue of that happy coalescence of matter and style, that innate and exquisite sympathy between the thought that gives life and the form that consents to every mood and of grace and dignity, which can be simple without being vulgar, elevated without being distant, and which is something neither ancient nor modern, always new and incapable of growing old.—Lowell.

Chinese Dietary.

Chinese cooking has for its general basis chicken broth or poultry jelly and red sauce. The latter accompanies nearly all the dishes; it is a kind of dissolved meat jelly flavored with pimento and coriander. Pork and mutton are almost exclusively eaten; horse and camel meat, however, may be bought. The number of edible dogs eaten annually in China is estimated at 5,000,000.

The Bed

The bed is the center and boundary of human life; around it cluster the sentiments of birth and death, of home and rest and love; it is the sovereign throne of the night, the greeting place of the dawn, the rich reward of a well spent day; it soothes pain, calms care and levels all distinctions in the mystery of sleep; in all time and place a thing of beauty and honor among the creature comforts of mankind.

This sentiment is expressed throughout in the

SUMMER FEEDS FOR CHICKS

Fowls in Confinement Must Be Supplied With Abundance of Green Feed and Meat or Milk.

Chicks and fowls in confinement during the hot weather must have lots of green food and meat or milk, or both. If they are on free range they can obtain much of their meat food in the form of bugs and worms and can add to their variety of grain the various vegetable growths that they obtain by foraging. This is equally true of the fowls.

Keep the house and yard clean.

Give a heavier feed of grain in the evening.

Keep poultry free from lice and the house free from mites.

Feed grain in straw or other litter to make the hens scratch for it.

Grow green crops in the poultry yards if they are not in permanent sod.

If you have had little or no experience in poultry keeping, start in a small way. Then increase as your experience and success warrant.

Don't let roosters run with the hens after the breeding season is over. The hens will lay just as well and the eggs will be infertile and will keep better.

Let the hens help themselves to a dry wash.

Market white-shelled and brown-shelled eggs in separate packages.

Ship or deliver eggs at least twice or three times weekly.

Cull the flock so as to eliminate the early molters and other unprofitable producers.

Infertile eggs will withstand marketing conditions much better than fertile eggs.

Market hens which you do not wish to carry longer as soon as they stop laying and begin to molt in the late summer or fall.

BEND MAY GET CITY DELIVERY

W. H. HUDSON THINKS CHANGE POSSIBLE.

Acting Postmaster to Start Correspondence with View to Improving Mail Service—Inspector Will Back Move.

That he will within the next week, start correspondence with the postoffice department, which will have as its object the securing of a city mail delivery for the city of Bend, was the statement Saturday of Acting Postmaster W. H. Hudson. Preliminary to taking this action, Mr. Hudson will bring the matter up with the city council and the Bend Commercial club, to obtain their endorsement. Mr. Hudson is confident that some sort of delivery can be had for Bend, and that if this is not a full city delivery, some other type of service can be obtained which will gradually be developed into the kind actually needed.

For several years, movements have started at intervals to get a city mail delivery for Bend, but although all requirements had been met more than two years ago, the letter carrier failed to make his appearance. Recently Mr. Hudson has been studying the situation, and believes that the rapid growth of the city will soon make accommodations inadequate even after the new postoffice has been moved into. The city delivery plan offers the quickest and best remedy for this condition.

Mr. Hudson states that in this movement he will have the assistance of the postal inspector for this district.
