Despite reiterated assertions that the steel workers' strike would be postponed, more than 300,000 men of this and allied trades are out following the calling of the strike on Monday. Representing the greatest industrial outbreak of years, this one thing is perhaps of chief significance to the news reading public. The strike is not for higher wages, better living conditions, or the things for which strikes are usually called, but as protest to the refusal of officials of the United States Steel Corporation to confer with union leaders over strike issues. Rioting by men who have left their work is reported from the Chicago section, Cleveland, Buffalo and Pennsylvania points, and within the walkout only four days old the death toll and number of injured, is relatively large.

After concluding his series of addresses in California, President Wilson turned his back on the Pacific coast Monday, and yesterday had reached Salt Lake City, Utah, in his tour through which he hopes to carry the league of nations covenant and the German peace treaty. That he is stronger in the Senate than may have been supposed, was indicated Tuesday, when a test vote in the upper house showed that opponents of the treaty had a majority of only two.

In European affairs, President Wilson now holds the key to what is today the most important problem, the Fiume question. Allied battleships have threatened to turn their fire on Fiume harbor, if Gabrielle d'Annunzio, commanding Italian forces does not immediately withdraw. At the same time it is pointed out that the trouble would be automatically quieted if the American president would endorse the agreement in regard to the disposition of Fiume, already reached by European diplomats.

Another complication in European diplomacy is the reported break of relations between Belgium and Holland, occasioned by Belgium's demand that the terms of the treaty of 1830 be cancelled. Two other of the smaller nations, Rumania and Serbia, are again clashing, and artillery engagements were reported during the past week.

The high cost of living question bobbed up serenely again the latter part of last week, when department of justice, and the bureau of labor statistics reported that retail prices in August had set a new altitude record, although wholesale and jobbing prices had fallen. The Attorney General's office strongly urged the passage of the Lever profiteer law as a remedy.

FOR MOVIE GOERS

Mr. and Mrs. Out-of-Town-Folk: We would have you appreciate that in Bend you will find a class of moving picture entertainment equal to anything you will find in Portland or any other large city. The nation's greatest stars are on our contracts and we assure you a pleasant evening at either of Bend's two moving picture houses.

On Friday and Saturday at the Grand theater, May Allison will appear in "Castles in the Air." As Fortuna, Miss Allison is the little girl lover of the lurid novel, the girl who seeks for the millionaire who can give her much of worldly goods. She finds him in her search, but the experiences of her young life are quite different from what she expected. On this same occasion a Lyons & Moran comedy and a Lloyd comedy will also be shown.

On the same evenings at the Liberty Charles Ray, always a popular star, will be seen in a role quite different than his usual performances. This picture will be "Hayfoot, Strawfoot." In this picture Ray is U. S. Grant Briggs in a training camp. There is a barrel of fun for everybody in this feature.

Mabel Normand is one of the scamps of the screen. Her appearance in Bend always provokes large attendance wherever she is. This time she is "The Pest," the girl who always gets in the way. Miss Normand as the wife, who gets into society is extremely good in this feature. She will be seen at the Grand Tuesday night only.

A play of real merit will be the appearance of Enid Bennett in "The Law of Men," at the Liberty Sunday and Monday nights. The features of this picture are the star as the molder of clay and lives, the romantic atmosphere of Washington Square of New York, a trap in a road house near the city, a sensational murder, trial and confession. It is a very striking play.

Put it in The Bulletin.
