REDMOND ENTERPRISE.

The establishment of another rural free delivery route out of Redmond, as reported in Saturday's Bulletin, marks another step in the development of a program on which the business men of that city have been quietly working for the past four years. Without blowing any trumpets to tell the world what they have been doing, but persistently, steadily and efficiently they have been working to bring the country districts into closer relation with the town. What they have accomplished may well be taken into consideration by the business interests of Bend, not only as showing what results efforts of this sort will produce, but also to make them understand what has been taken from under their eyes.

The business had its beginning four years ago when Redmond started a union high school and persuaded many of the school districts surrounding her own to join. It was no easy job. There was opposition to overcome, suspicion to allay, but the business men behind the move did the work. They visited every district, held meetings, talked with individuals, and were successful in getting favorable votes.

Starting with this nucleus the district has been enlarged by the addition of others until now it includes every school district north of Bend with only two or three exceptions. The Redmond union includes even the districts at Tumalo, looked upon around here as almost a suburb of Bend.

The result is that high school pupils from these districts are living in Redmond and attending the high school. Their parents visit them in Redmond and make business connections there. In short, Redmond is their business center.

Another way of tying the country to the city is through the establishment of telephone lines. Redmond has always been the headquarters of a farmers' mutual line and it has been extended in every direction, the last new line going into the Alfalfa section.

Still another, and the most efficacious, is by rural mail routes, and in developing these Redmond has been as active as in the formation of her union school district. The route to Sisters is the oldest but others have been added to it until we believe practically every community within 20 miles of the town and not on the railroad, except Tumalo and Alfalfa, is now getting its mail out of there.

We have recently seen an effort to extend the route into Alfalfa, and Saturday's news told of a route up into the Crooked River valley almost to Prineville's back door. We surmise that even now plans are being made to carry a route into the Tumalo section.

We must give due credit to the enterprise of the community that will see its opportunities and go out to turn them into trade realities. And with such a neighbor at our door it behooves our local business men to wake up and save a few things for themselves before they are all gone.

WRONG HUNCH GIVEN DESCHUTES SHERIFF

Roberts Rides 35 Miles on Tip That Liquor Is Coming In, Only to Find Cars Loaded with Game.

How two auto loads of what were described to him as contraband liquor were changed into three bears and a deer being brought in by a party of hunters, was told Saturday by Sheriff S. E. Roberts. "The cars had a load on, all right," he said, "but it certainly wasn't booze." Mr. Roberts had been informed the latter part of the week, that two cars were approaching from the south, each carrying a capacity cargo of bottled goods. The Deschutes county Sheriff immediately started south, and intercepted the supposed whiskey runners thirty-five miles of Bend. A thorough search failed to reveal any liquor.

SILOS BEING FILLED.

REDMOND, Oct. 2.—Several silos in the vicinity of Redmond are being filled this week. The corn crop is lighter than expected. The frost did not allow the ears to harden. The ensilage cutter of E. M. Eby has been kept busy on the ranches of Earl Benton, Moore Bros., G. W. Beaver and E. M. Eby.

WILL USE PICTURES AS ROAD PROPAGANDA

MEDFORD, Oct. 2.—Hundreds of pictures, and 5000 feet of moving pictures of the country along the backbone of the Cascade mountains, from Mt. Hood to Crater Lake, are to be used as propaganda for a road along the ridge of the mountains, according to Fred H. Kiser, Portland photographer, just arrived here from a trip along the proposed road location.

Such a road, Kiser asserts, would furnish one of the most wonderful scenic highways in the world. A national park edging the road, with laterals to include beautiful mountain lakes and other points of interest, is also planned.

Accompanying Kiser is Julius E. Stone, of Columbus, Ohio, who will write an article on the trip for the National Geographic magazine.

SULPHUR COMES IN.

REDMOND, Oct. 2.—Sulphur shipments, according to the county agent, are on the way for the various districts in the county. Two cars have arrived and four more are enroute. The second order for Bend and Redmond is about to be made. The sulphur shipments into the county will be heavier than originally expected.

Fifteen Years Ago

(From the columns of The Bulletin, of September 30, 1904.)

Postmaster Wimer, of Tumalo, says the bands of sheep returning from the mountain ranges, are desolating the Bull Creek flat. They are taking all the feed which residents depend on for their milk cows and other home stock, and are still filling irrigating ditches and otherwise making themselves very unpopular.

The work of enlarging the flume of the Pilot Butte canal commenced last Monday. Work is being pushed rapidly on the river of way of the new canal south of town, five miles of which has already been cleared.

Mrs. A. C. Lucas will leave Saturday for a visit to her old home in Fremont, Nebraska. Her two sons, Fred and Ralph will accompany her.

With the discussion of incorporation for Bend, a peculiar situation is developed at Prineville. Saloon licenses there are only $250, under a charter passed by the legislature, while the general state law places the minimum saloon license fee at $400. This question, however, would not cut any figure at Bend, for the law under which Bend would incorporate, gives the municipality power to fix saloon licenses, provided that they are not lower than the sum named in the state law.

Postoffice business is a fair index to the growth of a community. For the first quarter after the Bend postoffice was established, the total of cancellations was $144.45. For the second quarter, closing today, the cancellations are $256.45.

Bend had a coal oil famine, which was relieved by Freighters Davis arriving with a load Tuesday.

Mr. and Mrs. J. H. Overturf were agreeably surprised with a kitchen shower Monday afternoon, given by their friends.

Miss Mabel Hunter is able to be up after her long siege of typhoid fever.

Dick Vandeventer was in town from Powell Buttes Wednesday. He brought some of the finest apples seen in Bend for a long time, showing that good fruit can be raised in this country.

Mr. and Mrs. H. C. Ellis, of Chicago, arrived in Bend last Friday evening.

A. M. Drake left Monday morning to join Mrs. Drake, who is quite ill at Rochester, Minn. He drove through direct to Shaniko.

George Millican, a rancher from Pine Mountain, was in Bend Wednesday.

Creed M. Tippet took a trip to Prineville Monday.
