

TOURIST TRADE HINDERED BY LACK OF ROAD IMPROVEMENT

PORTLAND, Ore., Oct. 16.—Tourists who have planned to enter Oregon from the south, are turning back into California when they find that the long delayed highway from The Dalles to the California line is still a thing of the future, that the state highway commission has as yet put no visible mark on the central part of the state, and that a large mileage between here and Bend is measured along roads the condition of which acts as a powerful deterrent to the traveller.

Just the other day a letter from Klamath Falls states three parties made inquiry at one of the Klamath Falls hotels. They wanted to come North. They had plenty of money to spend and were bent on spending it on a trip that they knew would rival any in the West from a scenic standpoint and that would lead them by trout brooks and through hunting preserves teeming with fish and game. And they wanted to see the Oregon country that lies to the east of the Cascades and then turn down the Columbia to Portland to travel back to California over the pavements of the Pacific highway.

"I might say that three parties are standing at the desk asking about the roads north and if they can go down the Columbia river and back through the Willamette valley," reads the letter from Klamath.

"They are Stanley Dollar and family, J. M. Bots and family and H. A. Forbes and family. They have with them in addition to their touring cars a baggage outfit to transport their trunks and grips. This party is now planning to go back visit Look-out, Susanville, Sacramento and on to the city. Dollar, as you know, is with the Dollar steamship lines. The other men are shipbuilders who have plenty of money to spend.

"So you see what Oregon is missing in just this one party, from the standpoint of patronage, and what Oregon could have had this summer if we had the roads."

The writer has been observant and during the summer kept check of tourist travel that turned south from Crater lake and gave up the trip all wanted to take. It is an indication that when good roads are put in up through Central Oregon they should be built heavy enough and wide enough to handle large traffic, for there will be a rush of tourists in heavy and light cars that will break down anything but a first rate road and overthrow anything but a broad-gauge surface.

There are heard some arguments to the effect that with a road up through the central part of the state sufficient to handle the tourist traffic that wants to make the trip, there would not be hotel accommodations to care for the tourists. This is belied by facts and given little consideration to the capital ready to back hotel men in enlarging their quarters, when expansion is found necessary.

George L. Rauch, a Portland attorney, chairman of the home industries committee of the Portland Ad club recently returned from a trip through Central Oregon country and has this to say about accommodations at Bend:

"The Pilot Butte Inn, which Irvin Cobb says is the finest hotel in any small town in the United States, surely gives the tourist a hearty welcome and comfortable service. The visitor from the hot flat plains of the Middle West is greeted in the morning at breakfast with a wide expanse of snow capped peaks, and from the great plate glass windows in the dining room, can look upon the cool loftiness of The Sisters, The Bachelor, Old Broken Top, or Mount Washington.

"Bend is one city which is prepared and is entertaining her guests, Fred Fisher, who runs the brick hotel in Madras, maintains a fine establishment. It is a long ride from The Dalles to Bend over a virtual desert. Madras, with its excellent hotel, makes a very convenient oasis."

STATE F. OF L. ENDS MEETING

CONVENTION DEEMED ENTIRE SUCCESS.

Land and Labor Party Endorsed by Delegates in Closing Session— Employment Insurance Resolution Referred to Board.

Following the conclusion of a convention which lasted through the entire week, the last of the delegates to the State Federation of Labor convention left here Saturday to return to their homes in the various cities of the state. With three rousing cheers for Bend and three more for La Grande, the next place of meeting, the final session broke up late Saturday afternoon. The convention was referred to by President Otto Hartwig, in his closing address, as the most successful ever held in the history of organized labor in Oregon, and called especial attention to the fact that throughout the six daily sessions held last week, it had been found unnecessary at any time to appoint a Sergeant at arms in maintaining order.

Several hours of Saturday were used in the discussion of the resolution for a "land and labor party." A majority report handed in by the resolutions committee asked that the matter be left to a state convention of labor and farming representatives which will be called early in the year, while a minority report had as its object putting the convention on record as endorsing the proposed political party, while leaving its organization to the January convention. F. E. Coulter, of Portland, was the principle speaker for the minority report, urging that the convention should not ignore the opportunity of initiating a movement which, he declared, will spread over the entire nation. An overwhelming vote favored endorsement of the new political organization.

Employment Bill Referred.

To provide for the proper administration of funds for the aid of strikes and other labor movements in which help may be required from organizations outside the particular local involved, a resolution introduced by I. V. McAdoo, of Bend, favoring the incorporation of a national financing committee, was carried unanimously. Shortly after, the executive board reported on a deferred resolution in regard to the Crown and Golden Rod mills of Portland, and the delegates endorsed the recommendations that the companies concerned be placed on the unfair list.

A preliminary draft of the proposed constitutional amendment to insure employment for citizens of Oregon, was reported out of committee, and after lengthy discussion was referred to the executive board, in order that changes might be made, if deemed advisable, before the measure is initiated.

A feature in connection with the staging of the convention here was the daily publication of the Labor Bender, usually a weekly, which appeared every morning giving full details of the state labor meeting. The Bender is edited by I. V. McAdoo, and is printed in The Bulletin shop.

KNIGHTS KEEP COLUMBUS DAY

WORK DURING WAR AND AT PRESENT TIME TO FURTHER CAUSE OF AMERICANISM IS DWELT ON BY SPEAKER.

Briefly touching upon the history of Columbus Day, the pre-war work and the war work of the Knights of Columbus of America, appealing to his audience to support the post-war work of the lodge, which organized a great campaign to aid the returned soldier and sailor, Thomas G. Ryan, of Portland, a prominent K. C., addressed a well filled house Sunday at the B. A. A. C. gymnasium, the occasion being in celebration of Columbus Day. Mr. Ryan struck the key note when he said that the Knights of Columbus is pre-eminently an American institution and will fight unceasingly for the preservation of American institutions, doing all in its power to curb the sinister forces at work to undo mine them.

Dan Kellaher, intimately associated with the war work of the Knights of Columbus in Portland and Oregon spoke briefly upon the work that has been accomplished by the order during the war and outlined the proposed program of employment and education for the future of the returned service men who needed assistance.

The program of the evening consisted of selections by the Imperial Male Quartette, Mrs. W. M. Wagner and Mrs. Ashley Forrest.

LUNCH SHOULD BE NOURISHING

Once more the children are back in school and the task of preparing an appetizing basket lunch is their mother's every school day. The problem is to make a real contribution to the food which the children require to meet the needs of their growing bodies and active brains, to satisfy their appetites, and to keep them in health. It does not necessarily mean expensive foods or the expenditure of great effort on the part of those who fill the lunch basket. Home economics specialists have made a study of this question and have plainly set forth some interesting facts in Farmers Bulletin 712, "School Lunches," which is available for distribution and can be obtained free, so long as the supply lasts, by application to the United States Department of Agriculture, Washington, D. C.

The following suggestions are among those made in this bulletin for well-balanced school lunches.

- Basket Lunches.
1. Sandwiches with sliced tender meat for filling, baked apple, cookies or a few lumps of sugar.
  2. Slices of meat loaf or bean loaf, bread-and-butter sandwiches, stewed fruit and frosted cake.
  3. Crisp rolls, hollowed out and filled with chopped meats or fish, moistened and seasoned or mixed with salad dressing; orange, apple, a mixture of sliced fruits, or berries; cake.
  4. Lettuce or celery sandwiches, cup custard, jelly sandwiches.
  5. Cottage cheese and chopped green pepper sandwiches or a pot of cream cheese with bread-and-butter sandwiches, peanut sandwiches, fruit cake.
  6. Hard-boiled eggs, crisp baking-powder biscuits, celery or radishes, brown-sugar or maple-sugar sandwiches.
  7. Bottle of milk, thin corn bread and butter, dates, apple.
  8. Raisin or nut bread with butter, cheese, orange, maple sugar.
  9. Baked bean and lettuce sandwiches, apple sauce, sweet chocolate.

TOMATOES EASILY CANNED.

Only red, ripe, round tomatoes should be picked from the vine for canning, rather than partly green ones that may be left standing several days to "ripen," say the Oregon Agricultural college cookery specialists. The tomato does not develop its characteristic flavor after being picked. Scald, cold dip, peel and pack into sterilized jars, either whole or in large pieces. Fill to within one-fourth inch of top with thick tomato sauce. This helps to keep the tomatoes whole, plump and of good color. The sauce may be used later for soups and the tomatoes for salads. To each pint jar add one-half teaspoon salt and one teaspoon or more of sugar. Sterilize for 22 minutes in hot water bath.

TOMATO-APPLE MARMALADE.

Six pounds tomatoes, six of apples and nine of sugar are used with a 50 cent jar of preserved ginger to make tomato-apple marmalade, by O. A. C. cookery specialists. Cook the tomato soft and put through strainer. Cook the apples as for sauce. Boil tomatoes, apples and sugar to consistency of jam, adding ginger just before taking from fire. This will make 12 pints of delicious marmalade.

PRESERVE EXTRA TOMATOES.

Boil 6 pounds sugar, 2 quarts water, one-half lemon, one-half ounce cinnamon and one-fourth ounce ginger for 15 minutes, then add four pounds tomatoes gradually and cook till bright and clear. Stir occasionally to prevent burning. Cook rapidly to keep the color right. Allow to cool before packing.—O. A. C. Cookery.

WRITER OFFERS FARM ADVERTISING

Value and Methods of Using Home Paper to Sell Surplus Produce Announced for Farm Week.

OREGON AGRICULTURAL COLLEGE, CORVALLIS, Oct. 16.—A short course on using the home newspaper to sell surplus farm produce will be offered farmers attending farmers week at the college, Dec. 29-Jan. 3, by C. J. McIntosh, farmer, farm writer and ex-newspaper man.

"I have known farmers to pay a local commission man $50 to sell 100 tons of alfalfa at $20 a ton, when they could have sold it by paying the editor a dollar," said Mr. McIntosh in announcing the course. "They could have kept the extra $49, credited it to the buyer or split it with him. I asked why not advertise and sell direct, and they said, 'Why, I never thought of it.'"

"Not only the advantage but the method of using the home paper will be considered. The success of the advertisement depends on the facts selected for announcement, the form in which they are stated, and the reputation of the advertiser. All of these—except the last—will be explained and so far as possible demonstrated.

Specimen advertisements that have been business-getters with results are wanted for this course.

Using the home press is not only profitable business but sound public policy as well, Mr. McIntosh asserts. These papers help farm production by running many a farm story that enables the farmer to increase or protect his crops, and are fairly entitled to a share of the paid news matter—advertising.

They can be of real value to every farmer.
