WALKER BASIN WORK FINISHED FOR 1919

After a full summer of activity construction is now finished on the west unit of the Walker Basin Irrigation Company project, formerly the so-called Morson project, at La Pine. Already a few settlers have come in and started to clear their land against next spring's seeding but no special activity is expected by the management of the project until a few months later. Application has been made for patent on 9000 acres of land in the project and it is understood that the patent is to be issued. Next spring it is expected that construction on the east unit of the project will begin.
