CURE FOR POULTRY DISEASES

Use of Vaccine Has Considerable Value in Correcting Aliments, Says Professor Lewis.

Prof. Harry R. Lewis of New Jersey college before a recent meeting at the Connecticut station said the use of vaccine in the cure of poultry diseases has considerable value. Professor Lewis told of trying out a vaccine on hens afflicted with chicken pox and roup and the successful results. He believes that other diseases may be treated by the vaccine plan. The next step at the New Jersey station will be an effort to immunize pullets against chicken pox or roup by vaccinating while young and before they have been exposed to the disease.

POULTRY NOTES

Watch your flock carefully and as soon as one member shows disease remove it.

It is easy to keep your hens healthy if you know the laws of health and practice them.

Close confinement without exercise is not conducive to the best results in the poultry yard.

Geese are not like hens. Old geese lay better than young geese and old ganders are better than young ones.

The weather is something, but the hen is more. Have your hens in a laying condition and they will lay in spite of weather.

The dust bath is recommended highly for farm flocks but it should not be the only means of preventing lice as some birds will not dust themselves thoroughly.

How Egyptians Make Fire. The question of how the Egyptians made fire was one that often exercised archeologists. No representation of the process existed on the monuments, nor does the nation appear to have attached any religious significance to the origin of fire. The question was settled by the discovery at Kahun of a regular bow drill for making fire, together with several sticks showing the burnt holes caused by fire drilling.—National Geographic Society Bulletin.
