

NON-PARTISAN LEAGUE GIVEN SOUND RATING

FARMERS WARNED OF STATE SOCIALISM

FOSTER IS SPEAKER

George Russell Urges Co-operative Packing Plant to Evade Clutches of "Big Five"—Live-stock Movies Shown.

Farmers usually earn all they get, but they did not deserve the Non-Partisan league, declared Arthur Foster, North Dakota wheat rancher who appeared Thursday night as chief speaker of the evening at the Grand theater. Referring to a previous address regarding low beef prices, made by George Russell, of Prineville, Mr. Foster avowed himself strongly in favor of cooperation as the solution. "But for God's sake and your own sake, don't let any grievance lead you into state socialism as represented by the Non-Partisan league," he implored. A well-filled house, chiefly farmers, guests of the Bend Commercial club, heard the address. The use of the theater was donated by the manager, O. M. Whittington.

Mr. Foster traced the state socialist movement in North Dakota from 1912 showing how the soil was made ready for the propaganda of the Non-Partisan organizers in the widespread discontent which was caused by the wheat dockage disagreements arising between the farmers and terminal elevator companies. "It is just such a grievance as this that gives state socialism its chance," he said. "If you are confronted by a problem of the kind, solve it yourselves through cooperation, but turn a deaf ear to the Non-Partisan organizers. We in Dakota were rapidly solving the dockage question, but we started a little too late. The league got its foothold, and it will take more than 25 years for the state to recover from the harm that has been done."

"When good fellows get together, I'm right there"

—Chesterfield

THE most companionable bunch of tobaccos ever rolled into a cigarette—silky, aromatic Turkish, and fine, full-flavored Domestic, expertly chosen and expertly blended. That's Chesterfield. And they sure do "satisfy!"

Orgy of Debt Enjoyed.

Mr. Foster quickly sketched the progress of the league in his home state. "It swept over North Dakota like a prairie fire in 1915," he said. "In dues from the farmer members, $277,000 was collected by the organizers, but it was a farm organization in name only. The governing power was an inner circle of bred-in-the-bone socialists, most of whom had not even been residents of North Dakota until the coming of the league."

The first move of the socialist government was to try to wipe out the constitutional debt limit which obtained. There were enough hold-over senators in 1917 to defeat this, but at the next legislature it went through and the so-called farmers' government immediately plunged into an orgy of debt. It is a significant fact, however, that the state bonds issued to provide for contemplated expenditures are not marketable, Mr. Foster said.

Disloyalty Seen.

He reviewed the disloyalty of the league leaders during the war, then told of the organization by the state under the new regime, of the "United Consumers' league," a chain of state stores for which $1,100,000 was subscribed by the farmers, and the stocks in which showed an investment of only $105,000. In banking practice, he told how post-dated checks and past due notes were permitted as collateral, while in the chief state bank, capitalized at $2,000,000, in which all public funds must be deposited, and in which such deposits now amount to $35,000,000, the law of the state allows no inspection by a bank examiner.

The "newspaper grab" was the evidence of another monopolistic policy. In each county, he said, one newspaper was designated as the official publication, and any notices published in that county, for state, county, town, or legal matters, must be published in the paper so designated.

"The Non-Partisan league is coming to Oregon," he warned. "If may not come in that name, but it will mean only one thing—state socialism. In Washington it is masquerading under the name of the Triple Alliance, and in Portland they call it the Land and Labor party, but it's all the same."

Packers Denounced.

"There is only one way to combat it. When the organizer comes to see you and wants your sixteen dollars for dues, keep your money in your pocket, or if you must get rid of it, throw it in the fire. Then it cannot come back to you with the interest of extravagance and discontent that has come to be so familiar to us in Dakota."

A vigorous denunciation of the controlling corporations in the packing industry, to whom he alluded as the "dirty big five," was made by George Russell, the opening speaker of the evening. "When hides go down, shoes go up," he said, "and although the price of cattle is lower today than it was in the fall, the cost of beefsteak remains the same. Either the stockyards buyers must come to us, or we should establish a cooperative packing plant. When we ship our cattle unsold, to the stockyard s, we are playing a losing game."

High prices can be lowered if the consumer so desires, Mr. Russell declared. Advanced costs, he believes, are in a large measure the result of the unwillingness of the American to buy anything but the most expensive articles.

Yellow Labor Predicted.

Returning to the ranch question, the speaker predicted that with present conditions prevailing, another generation would see the ranching of the northwest handled by Japanese and Chinese. "The drop in the market is not due to an over-production of cattle, but to an over-production of speculators," he said.

As the concluding feature of the evening, a mile of film showed the judging of the Holstein bull which sold for $106,000, scenes on the Day & Rotherock Shorthorn ranch near Spokane, the Dunn Shorthorn farm, near Wapato, and the world's champion Jersey cow, Vive La France. Scenes showing the magnificent stock entered at the Pacific International Livestock exposition, were thrown on the screen, and throughout the entire movie livestock show, a running fire of comment was kept up by O. M. Plummer, general manager of the exposition. Mr. Plummer was the guest of honor at a dinner given at the Pilot Butte Inn earlier in the evening, by the members of the Deschutes County Shorthorn Breeders.

Because of the educational value of the film, children of the Bend schools were taken to see it in the afternoon, two packed houses resulting. According to Manager Whittington, the little folks showed even more interest than the adult audience of last night.

Careful Mothers Insist on Foley's. Foley's Honey and Tar Compound has been used in so many homes for so many years that mothers everywhere know that this standard family medicine contains no opiates or other ingredients that are injurious to children or adults. Children like it and it does them good. For coughs, colds, croup, whooping cough.—Sold Everywhere.—Adv.

POWELL BUTTE.

Sunday on Mill creek. They report the water too muddy for fishing, but enjoyed the trip.

Mr. and Mrs. J. A. Riggs returned from Brownsville Sunday evening where they were called because of the illness and death of Mr. Riggs' father. They were accompanied by Mr. Riggs' mother who will make her home here with her son. A small nephew also came along to spend the summer.

Mrs. Hugh Stewart was hostess to Powell Butte Sorosis last week. A large attendance, and many matters of interest were discussed. The luncheon was a dainty treat much enjoyed by the ladies present. Mrs. Stewart was assisted by Mrs. Gladys Stout and Mrs. Roy Roberts. The next meeting of Sorosis will be with Mrs. George C. Truesdale, April 23. Bert Reynolds has installed a telephone in his new ranch home, number 2522.

Mr. and Mrs. Ed Rucker are employed on the S. D. Mustard ranch. They have two children who are attending the Edwards school.

The work of clearing the tract of land east of the S. D. Mustard ranch, that is owned by a company, for the purpose of potato growing, goes steadily forward. A crew of eight men is at work and others will be employed later. Practically all the trees and sage brush have been pulled, and plowing will soon start. George Hobbs, closed Tuesday of this week.

Mr. and Mrs. George Whitsett and children visited at the home of Henry Whitsett, in Bend, Sunday.

George Kissler and son spent Sunday in Bend. Mrs. Anna Bretzger, of Redmond, is keeping house for her brother, Kissler, and children, while Mrs. Kissler is visiting in the east.
