

SUMMER TO BE RECORD SEASON FOR TOURISTS

many know of wonderful Dillman cave, just two miles from the main road? Not one in ten thousand.

A tour of the country made in the past week reveals possibilities for systematically planned vacation trips.

Both the Metolius and Deschutes rivers are heavy drawing cards with fishermen. Sunday fully 200 people were casting in the former stream.

If the driver is willing to dodge numerous tree trunks along a narrow road, now is the time to sample the two Lava lakes and Elk lake, which may be made in two hours and a half easily.

Odell, Crescent and other lakes to the south have been open several weeks. Suttle's lake has shared honors with the Metolius to the north, but now parties are going further on to Blue lake and some by trail to Square lake.

A three mile hike by the road or a milletrough the brush over the forest trail rewarded those who spent last Sunday at East lake, where Eastern brook trout weighing up to five pounds were biting fairly well.

So much for the fishing. Dad may like it, but mother and the children have to wash the dishes and listen to father dictating how the trout should be grilled and all that.

Both the roads to the Edison and Arnold ice caves are in good condition and the caverns have their usual stock of refrigeration material.

Picnic parties in the northern end of the county are still making Opal springs a rendezvous, but this curious spot will soon cease to attract, when a power company now at work there completes its building operations.

Last, but far from least, is the road up Broken Top. While this will not be open to automobiles probably until July 15, one may go as far as the Tumalo ranger station, from which a wonderful view may be obtained.

Yes, folks, it's time to pack up the old lunch basket, put 10 gallons of gas in the tank, dig up the khaki overalls and head for the tall timber.

Hair "a la Pompadour."

The style of arranging the hair pompadour originated with the French women about the middle of the eighteenth century. This style of hair-dressing is believed to have derived its name from the notorious Mme. De Pompadour.

LONG SESSION ENDS MEETING OF THE GRANGE

ity, one to another but they must accept this responsibility, if the nation and the individual are to progress," he concluded.

Non-Partisan League Gag

That there is danger that the Non-Partisan League may gain a foothold in Oregon, was intimated before the evening session by State Master Spence. Mr. Spence refused to give even his personal opinion as to the merits or lack of merits of the league, but when asked as to the possibility of state socialism gaining a foothold in Oregon, he replied: "If the Grange does not solve the problems before us, something like that is likely to happen."

National Master Lowell had no opinion, personal or official, he declared. "Even a personal opinion would be regarded as official, and you know the Grange, as an organization, is not permitted any political affiliations," he said.

Color Line Drawn

Resolutions were disposed of toward the close of the session, the one of chief interest to farmers of this section favoring legislation preventing acquisition of land by Asiatics. Others were: Endorsing the conduct of the affairs of the forest service; Condemning wrong use of the emergency clause by the legislature; Asking legislation to allow only taxpayers to vote on bond issues; Favoring investigation of the feasibility of organizing a farmers' bank; Recommending improvement of transportation facilities; Urging the designation and construction of more market roads; Favoring the national standardization of schools, with the head of the educational system a member of the cabinet at Washington; Recommending the substitution of water power for gas and development so as to furnish power for the use of the farmer.

GIVES HINTS OF WORK ON BIG PROJECT

hearers to mean the materialization of the Benham Falls project plans, George L. Burt, San Francisco potato broker, spoke informally before a gathering of Bend business men and Deschutes county farmers at the circuit court rooms last night, explaining his position in regard to the employment of Japanese on his potato ranches in the north end of Deschutes county. Convinced his hearers before the close of the session that his plans do not include the selling or leasing of land to Japanese, that he is employing Orientals because he has been unable to secure white labor and that he considers that in the present time of impending food shortage it is the patriotic duty of every American farmer to make his land as productive as possible, Mr. Burt received both from members of the Commercial club, and from John M. Perry and P. E. Pellett, representing the Terrebonne farmers, assurances of faith and of future cooperation.

Soil Pleases Expert.

Discussion on the Japanese question was lengthy and at times wandered somewhat from the point, but in the main proved of great interest to the men who filled the hall. As an indication of the possibilities of Central Oregon, the opinion given by Henry Hansen, manager for George Shima, California potato king, was taken as especially valuable. "I am much pleased with the potato land in this section," Mr. Hansen who accompanied Mr. Burt on his trip to Central Oregon, declared. "I consider it unequalled anywhere. It is needed for seed production, and we in California need your seed. It runs true to type, and is free from disease, and I believe that a great future in potato culture awaits you. One thing you needn't be afraid of, and that is Japanese colonization. You couldn't coax them in now."

The meeting, presided over by D. G. McPherson, president of the Commercial club, opened with a brief statement by Mr. Burt, in which he referred to implied threats made against him because of his employment of additional Japanese, expressed his unwillingness to employ Japanese as long as white labor could be had, denied reports that he had employed a gunman to guard Orientals, asked for cooperation, but made it apparent that he would refuse to yield to coercion.

Legislate, Advises Burt.

Mr. Pellett declared that feeling among the Terrebonne farmers is at a white heat, and that he has had hard work to prevent mob violence. "One man wanted to come with me tonight and bring his guns," he said.

"but I would not permit it." The fear of Japanese colonization has paralyzed development among the farmers, who are putting off silo construction and even neglecting to buy needed farm machinery."

Mr. Burt made it plain that under the law he could bring in all the Japanese he wanted, but that he had no desire to do this without the support of business men and farmers. "We can afford to let go and forget all about our Terrebonne farm," he said, "but America needs the food, and it is our duty to produce. I want cooperation, but if I don't get it, I'm off, that's all."

As a safeguard against colonization, Mr. Burt advised legislation against ownership by Orientals.

Need for Labor Told.

Frank McCaffery, prominent rancher in the Redmond section, declared that under present labor conditions he would be willing to hire any sort of labor to save his crop. "Mr. Burt has put us on the potato map," he said, "and the attitude which has been taken, means simply that we are standing in our own light. Before the season is over we will be lucky if we can get Japs at $5 a day."

Douglas Mullarky and Max Cunningham, of Redmond, Lee Davis and Hugh O'Kane, of this city, were among other speakers.

Objections to Japanese labor, it gradually developed, were based chiefly on the fear that introduction of the Nipponese as laborers would lead to colonization. With positive assurances from Mr. Burt that he would aid the settlers in preventing any such occurrence, and that he had no intention of bringing in any more Orientals for his Terrebonne ranch, the delegates from that section expressed their personal desire to cooperate with him. He accepted their invitation to meet with other farmers from the community in Terrebonne.
