TRUE BILL ERROR AID TO DEFENDANT

That an error in drawing the indictment against R. E. Jones of Prineville, who, with George London of Crook county, was charged in federal court in Portland with the manufacture of alcoholic liquor, resulted in the lesser charge of having liquor in his possession, was the statement of W. P. Myers, attorney for the two defendants, on a hurried visit to Bend Sunday. London's trial is set for later in the month.

ETIQUETTE AT FIJI TABLE

Guest Would Do Well to Familiarize Himself With the Rules, Which Are Exceedingly Strict.

If ever you go to Fiji and are asked to attend a public dinner, pray be very careful how you behave or it may cost you your life, is the injunction of a writer in London Answers. A public dinner in Fiji is a grand affair, and all the guests give a hand in feeding the oven or stirring the pot. A floor of clean leaves is covered with coconuts, on which are heaped baked taro and yams—like a large potato—to the amount of several tons. The next tier comprises a well oiled "pudding in green leaves" called "vakalolo." Baked turtles are next heaped on top of these puddings of two or three hogs baked whole.

At one public dinner in Fiji there were fifty tons of yams, fifteen tons of vakalolo puddings, seventy turtles, five carloads of yagons and 200 tons of uncooked yams.

A chief, having eaten a coconut without offering a piece to one of his followers, the latter went over to the enemy and staged out his former master in their next battle. Asking for mercy, the stern reply was, "Don't you recollect the nut at the last public dinner? For that you die."

Another chief once sat with his father-in-law and on passing a dish of cooked fish, he broke off a bit of it. A dark secret covered the relative's face, and before many hours were passed, he saw his son-in-law, having first intimated that he was insulted by being offered a broken tail.

HARDING AT HOME

Here is the very latest picture of Mr. and Mrs. Harding as they look at home.

NO SLEEP WITHOUT DREAMS

Hours of Unconsciousness Filled With Them, Though We May Not Always Remember It.

Dreaming is no vain and idle slumber's game. Solomon to the contrary notwithstanding. It's because you need to dream that you go to bed nights. You've probably been laboring under the absolute impression that it is for the sake of rest that you spend a third of your life in sleep.

"Absurd," says Andre Tridon, New York psychanalyst, according to the Evening Sun of that city. "Every branch of your complex, busy organism is on the job 24 hours a day. Your heart never rests; neither do your lungs nor liver nor brain cells. But you do need to dream, because only so can the ordinary man relieve all his 'urges.'"

Napoleon Bonaparte had things all his own way for a spell, and just so long he guided the world's destiny in no sleepy style without being abed more than two hours a night. But—when the world balked at gratifying longer his will to dominate, damped up his ego urge in St. Helena, he slept ten hours a day. That is, he dreamed that long daily.

To sleep is to dream, whether or not you remember anything about it next morning. You dream continuously, at an amazing speed rate, all the while you're unconscious, and every dream acts out, dramatizes, one of your wishes, gratifies an urge.

Ancient Feminine Splendor

For extravagance the modern American woman is an amateur in comparison with her ancient sister. In the Philadelphia museum six sheets of gold so thin that it was pliable as cloth show perforations at top and bottom. These are 16 by 20 inches in size, and were probably used as ruffles on the gown of a fashionable Inca princess. Then she could have had her choice of any one of the eight golden breast-plates in the collection and one of the many golden crowns, a pair of the large fan-shaped filigree earrings, and the girdle, three feet long and seven inches wide, made up of 133 gold bars, each four inches long.

Submarine Radio

The last annual report of the bureau of standards states that members of the bureau's staff have developed very successful methods of communicating with submerged submarines by radio-telegraphy. With a single-turn coil or loop attached to the outside of the submarine, signals can be received as well when the vessel is submerged as when it is at the surface. It is also possible to transmit from a submerged submarine a distance of 12 miles. Thus it becomes possible for a ship and a submarine to exchange recognition signals. A coil aerial is a satisfactory direction finder when submerged and readily receives signals transmitted thousands of miles, just the same as when used in the air. The navy has equipped its larger submarines with this apparatus.—Scientific American.

HERDINE HAD HER SYMPATHY

Swedish Maid Took Paragraph in Book Which She Was Reading a Little Too Literally.

One of the peculiarities of our language was brought to the notice of a Chicago woman by her Swedish maid. This girl had attended night school for some weeks and was delighted by her attainments in English. She expressed her wish to try her knowledge by reading a story in English, and the mistress recommended for her perusal, a tale called "A Modern Cinderella," then running in one of the magazines. It was simply worded and appeared not to present any linguistic pitfalls.

"Did you like it, Hilda?" asked the mistress, when the magazine was returned.

"Yea, ma'am," was the reply, "but I am sorry she had so much trouble and those glass eyes, too. My brother, he had one glass eye, and it was hard for him."

The lady of the house was puzzled; so Hilda unfolded the magazine and pointed with a respectful finger to the following undeniable proofs:

"As Polly moved about the kitchen, doing her work, her eyes suddenly fell on the letter which lay unopened on her aunt's lap.

"Keep your eyes where they belong," said that lady sharply, and poor Polly colored with shame."

Just What Did He Mean?

Little Henry Hoochhammer is a typical Hoosier youngster, who uses his ears to good advantage. Since prohibition has been enforced in Indiana he has heard a great many remarks made by people who in the past were accustomed to imbibing occasionally. But at Christmas he electrified his family by his own opinion.

The Christmas tree was aglow and everyone was talking about its beauty, etc. Finally it came Henry's time to say something and he did. He looked at the brilliant tree, "Well, it's all lit up," he sighed, "and I sure wish I was, too."—Indianapolis News.

GARAGE EXPLOSION CAUSE OF BIG FIRE

was carried out, overcome by smoke. At one time no less than eight residences were on fire as the result of sparks blown from the burning buildings, but a special detail, sent out by Fire Chief Carlson, prevented losses from this source. Another block of wooden buildings, south of the second-hand store, was menaced, but the flames were kept in check.

Large crowds surrounded the fire area, and a slight disposition toward looting was shown, but was promptly checked by the police. Volunteers, not members of the department, were plentiful, and their instant response to requests for aid won high praise today from the fire chief and Rebuilding Plans Uncertain.

Prospects for rebuilding are as yet uncertain. Mr. Fox, who for some time has been planning on replacing the frame structure occupied by the Pioneer garage with a permanent building, was not fully decided this morning as to what course to pursue, but, as stone for foundations and walls had already been hauled to the lot adjoining the site of the burned building, it is thought that work may soon be started. Neither the Moose lodge nor De Armond & Gilbert has made a decision as to the replacing of the buildings lost in the fire.

The Pioneer garage today moved its headquarters to the old Modern garage building on Irving street, where its machine shop and new cars were already located.

LIGHTS MATCH, LOOKS AT GAS

FIRE FOLLOWS WHEN PRINEVILLE GARAGE MAN INSPECTS TANK WHILE IN BEND—LUCK SAVES CAR AND OWNER.

Oscar Houston, Prineville garage man, while in Bend Sunday night, struck a match while his gasoline tank was being filled to see how much motor fuel he had been given. Houston wasn't hurt, but the hose at the Bend garage filling station was burned and only quick action in immediately smothering the flames saved the car. Houston drove his auto back to Prineville the same night.

The fire alarm was turned in at 9:30 o'clock, but, though the engine made a record run, the gasoline blaze had been extinguished before the arrival of Engineer Lee Stevens and the members of the volunteer fire department who were on duty on the Fourth.

"Folks do get away with such foolish stunts," Chief Tom Carlson said, in commenting on the incident. "But, unless a man wore a necklace of horseshoes, I'd call it suicide."

CENTRAL OREGON JUNIPER HISTORY OF USEFULNESS

termine whether the lands were in fact agricultural or timber lands. The irrigationalists won the case.

"But soon thereafter the government became doubtful as to the exact nature of the juniper, a stockman near Burns, who was in need of fence posts, filed on a quarter section of juniper land at the base of Buck mountain. It was an agricultural filing. A discerning government department rejected the application on the ground that the land was more valuable for timber than for agriculture. So the stockman thereupon filed a timber claim on it. Another discerning government department, or perhaps the same one, ruled that juniper was not timber and the second application was rejected. What the stockman did for fence posts is not historically recorded.

"But the government has, nevertheless, been firm in the conviction that juniper, while not timber, is at least wood. An enterprising citizen of Oregon conceived the idea of draining a great swamp and of using the waters thereof to irrigate a tract of dry land, in all about 100,000 acres. At that time the nearest railroad was 150 miles away. To operate the dredger, fuel was required, and coal or wood was out of the question. So he sent his men far up the slopes of Stein's mountain to cut juniper, which was little more than brush. He was indicted for stealing wood from government land. He got out of it by paying for the 'wood.' It did not matter that he was the only possible user of the wood, that unless the lands he was working on were reclaimed, there would be no settlers, and that without settlers the juniper would forever grace the sides of a mountain known only to sheep herders. He had to pay a round price for it.

"In the same year, in Lake county, times were hard. Two men, in need of bread and butter, applied to a stockman for work. He agreed to buy juniper fence posts from the men. They went out on a lava bed and began to cut. Thereupon the stockman was also indicted.

"Such incidents marked the change from a free and open juniper range to a valuable asset of the government. With this history before us we may well doubt whether lack of men willing to cut is the whole trouble in failure to supply the pencil manufacturers. Where would they cut? It is no doubt possible to buy juniper from the government as wood. But there are formalities to be observed and there is money to pay. The man who works at day labor does not have the means to buy, nor can he await the tedious processes of the government. His wants are immediate. Presumably logging companies, adequately financed, must attack the problem. But they would better proceed quietly and speak softly. For capital to attack a national resource is risky. These are days of conservation. What difference if the present-day pencil user be required to unroll a strip of paper to find the point of his pencil if future generations are assured the satisfaction of whittling for it? If the history of timber lands is repeated, one day we shall gaze with awe upon a great lead pencil reserve comprising most of Central Oregon."

GETTING BELGIUM'S LIVESTOCK BACK TO A PEACE-TIME BASIS

Belgium is leading all European countries in reconstruction. Although being affected more than any of the allied powers through the devastation of her agricultural districts, she is rapidly getting to the point where aid from the allied countries will not be needed. Above is a scene taken in the market square at Ypres, making a striking contrast of the "Devastation" in the background and the thriving "Reconstruction" in the foreground. The cattle show was organized by the Provincial Council of the Western Allied Agricultural Relief Committee.
