

HANLEY FAVORS EAST AND WEST TRAVEL ROUTES

W. R. KING IS IN BEND WITH "BIG BILL"

HEADED FOR BURNS

Harney County Ranchman Interested in Uniting Oregon By Improving Roads; King to Practice Law in Washington, D. C.

"Big Bill" Hanley of Burns, leading ranchman and nationally known figure, and Will R. King, until recently chief counsel for the United States reclamation service, passed through Bend Wednesday on their way to Burns.

King, who resigned June 15 from the reclamation service, is on his way to the Hanley ranch for a vacation. On his return he will proceed to Washington, D. C., to open law offices there, specializing in reclamation cases and cooperating with the government in this work, he stated this morning.

Not having visited Bend since 1911, at which time he was a justice of the supreme court of Oregon, Mr. King was enthusiastic in his mention of the advances which have been made in Bend and in Central Oregon.

"Big Bill" is convinced that the movement of population it to turn away from the city, and that following the election this fall, great advances in the next few years are to be made in the country.

"For this reason I am interested in the improvement of the east and west roads in Oregon," said Mr. Hanley. "Not that the other roads are not important, but this country was built from east to west, and Oregon must be connected up from east to west if her industries are to be successful. The people west of the mountains think of them as a barrier. It would do a lot of them good to come up here and get sunburned. For this reason I am glad to see that the McKenzie Pass road is being improved."

Hanley and King left on the stage this morning for Burns

The holdings of the Central Oregon Associates are largely those of the Bend Park Co., in the east end of town, and the program of development which Mr. Wood believes will be most effective is the building and sale of moderate sized, well constructed houses as rapidly as the demand for additional dwellings in Bend warrants.

BEND'S SUMMER TOURIST TRADE AT ITS HEIGHT

HOTELS CROWDED AND MANY CAMPING

ALL ARE ENTHUSIASTIC

Central Oregon Gets Good Advertising Through Letters and Cards of Vacationers; Continues Through August.

Tourist trade through Bend is at its height with indications that it will continue strong throughout August and the early part of September. The gasoline shortage has its effect in lowering the number, but on the other hand it causes some of those who do come to stay longer and get better acquainted with Bend and locality.

The number of tourists who registered at the hotels last week is estimated at 180. There is no way of computing the number who passed through who are camping on the roads, but remembering that many people prefer to travel that way, it is certain that the total number of tourists who visited Bend during the week was well over 200.

Most of these people are coming from California and other western states at present. Tourists from the east will probably be numerous later in the month. Ten or twelve cars pull up before local hotels every evening, with an average of four people. Registration at all of the hotels reaches capacity almost every night, and as there are few salesmen on the road at present, it is safe to presume that a large percentage are tourists.

Not a day passes but several parties visit the mills and other industries here. Leaving out of consideration the amount of money spent in Bend by these tourists, which is considerable, the advertising value of our tourist trade is incalculable.

A significant fact in regard to the tourist traffic is the appreciation with which they regard Bend and the surrounding territory, and the enthusiasm with which they write to their friends in the east and elsewhere, of the scenic wonders and of the wonderful possibilities of this district. This is not a mere surmise, not less than fifty post cards, pictures of the inn, the mills, and scenic views taken near here, are mailed from the Pilot Butte Inn every day. These cards do not go to nearby towns, but to the east and south, where numbers of people are learning of Central Oregon and of Bend.

HARD SURFACE ROAD DESIRED

COMMERCIAL CLUB TO PROTEST GRAVEL

Paving in Bend and Airplane Plans Discussed By Business Men; Eastern Speaker Praises Bend.

The Bend Commercial club will endeavor to persuade the state highway commission to put down a hard surface on the north line of The Dalles-California highway, instead of the gravel surface for which a contract recently was let, according to a decision reached at the weekly luncheon held at the Pilot Butte Inn yesterday.

The matter of changing the type of surfacing was presented to the club by W. C. Birdsall. Mr. Birdsall said that H. F. Wickner, who has the contract for the graveling, agreed that the road would not stand up, and he asserted, the only solution was a hard surface. Mr. Birdsall then read a letter from C. S. Reed of the Willite Co., offering to place two inches of Willite on the road for $1.50, with a five-year guarantee. For 25 cents additional, Mr. Reed offered to prepare the sub-grade for surfacing.

After a short discussion, during which Floyd Dement offered to share the expense of paving a city block for demonstration purposes, and Carl A. Johnson suggested an automobile assessment for street paving purposes, the club voted to appoint a committee to take the matter up.

George E. Love, temporary manager of the local airplane company, then discussed the company's plans and asked for local support toward securing a landing field.

In closing the meeting, President Wood called on George E. Wood of New Bedford, Mass., a member of the Central Oregon Associates, the company which is building a number of houses here. In the course of a humorous talk, Mr. Wood complimented the club on its interest in local development affairs and prophesied a greatly increased growth for Bend in the coming 10 years. "You have a wonderful climate here," said Mr. Wood, comparing it with that of his home state, "and the other necessary resources of citizenship and power that will build a large city."

POTATO QUALITY IN COUNTY GOOD

Well Known Grower Says Netted Gems Will Average Better Than Year Ago.

Although the acreage of potatoes in Central Oregon may not be as heavy as former years, the quality of Netted Gems this year will be far above the last year's crop, according to J. A. Melvin, a well known potato grower, residing east of Bend. The potatoes of this year's crop are setting closer to the surface, according to Mr. Melvin, an indication of a better quality of potatoes. Last year the potatoes average two to six in a hill, while this year, says the veteran spud culturist, the potatoes average from four to twelve in a hill.

INDIANS FINED FOR VIOLATION OF GAME LAWS

KILLED DEER OUT OF SEASON

GAME WARDEN ACTIVE

Wild Peter and Young Boise of Warm Springs Reservation Plead Guilty; Wardens Have Strange Experience.

Harking back to the instincts of their forefathers, Wild Peter and Young Boise, Warm Springs Indians, disregarded the game laws of the state and apparently have been engaging in a flourishing trade in deerskins, according to District Game Warden H. McDonald and J. J. Craig of the state game service headquarters, who is assisting the district chief in running down law violators in the Central Oregon country. Both Peter and Boise pleaded guilty to the charge of killing deer out of season and each paid a fine of $25. "Injun" Moody, alleged to be included in the buckskin business, is expected to plead early in the week, his squaw having vouched for his appearance. Mr. McDonald, Mr. Craig and R. M. Buchwalter of Bend returned to Bend last night from the Ochoco National forest, where the Indians were apprehended near the Beaver ranger station.

Mr. McDonald reported finding another Indian camping ground where abundant evidence in the form of venison refuse, hoofs and scraps of hide indicated that a wholesale slaughter of deer, regardless of sex or season, had been carried on.

Redskins Confess Wrong. Reports of law violations by scattered bands of Warm Springs Indians have been coming in recently and Thursday morning the two game officials started by auto to the Ochoco forest. Arriving at the camp near the Beaver station, they surprised five squaws, one of whom was industriously engaged in chewing fresh deerskins, an early step in the Indian process of tanning. Deer feet and several sacks of hair were also found in the tepee.

Dodging under a wordy barrage of Chinook and broken English, launched by the squaws, the officials secured the evidence, then sat down and waited until the two braves returned from their work. They professed entire ignorance of English, and an interpreter was pressed into service, wringing from them a confession, and an agreement to plead guilty to the charge on the following day. When the conference had ended, the aborigines showed a better knowledge of current Anglo-Saxon than of their native tongue.

On their return to Bend the officials demolished a fish trap, found 13 miles south of this city, on the Deschutes. No arrests were made in connection with the latter incident.
