German Steel Is Carried In Lung By Ex-Soldier

Carrying in one lung a 2½-inch piece of German steel, William A. Botz, formerly of the 73rd division, is here from Walla Walla to visit his father, John Botz, county road master. Young Botz received his souvenir of the war while fighting in the Flanders front line trenches, four days before the signing of the armistice. As a result of his wound, he has been under treatment in a government hospital until recently.

Vain Warnings.

An eminent actor-manager tells a story concerning a clergyman and his actor son. Prior to his going on the stage the father wrote to the manager, saying, "My son, John, has threatened to go on the stage, and I want you to stop him." However, shortly afterward, the son did go on the stage, and the manager, meeting him one day, asked how his father took it. "I have not seen him," was the reply, "but he takes some interest in me, because whenever any actor is charged with a crime he underlines the report of it in the newspapers and sends it to me."

Rubber-Using Insects.

When Para rubber trees are tapped, after the gum has run into receptacles and stiffened a species of large black ant is accustomed to cut out pieces of the rubber and carry them away. Bees also find use for India rubber, and some species in South America actually cut the bark of trees that produce resinous substances in order to cause a flow of the sap. The gum is employed by the bees as a ready-made wax for their nests.

Peculiar Amusement.

Francis Bacon was so fond of fine clothes that he spent his odd time in trying to devise new styles and features of dress. During his life he made some 1,200 drawings of freakish costumes. When he could not get anybody to wear them, he hired a number of men to don the grotesque attire and to promenade the streets for his pleasure.

Ancient Dentistry.

Interesting specimen of Etruscan dentistry is now in the civic museum at Corneto of the Necropolis of Tarquinia and consists of three teeth, or, more properly, four glutment attachments and three supplies, the attachments being gold rings and the teeth supplied being the central incisors and bicusps. The two central incisors are made from a single ox tooth grooved down to give it the appearance of two upper central incisors.

Nine Points of the Law.

It has been said that success in litigation requires a good deal of patience, a good deal of money, a good cause, a good lawyer, a good counsel, good witnesses, a good jury, a good judge, and, last but not least, good luck. But the saying is really a part of the proverb which says that "possession is nine points of the law," and that anybody is welcome to the tenth if they can get anything out of it.

Permanent Whitewash.

Mix six pounds of whitening with cold water, taking care to leave no lumps. It should be about the consistency of thick cream. In an old jar steep three ounces of size in cold water for 12 hours. Then make it very hot, but be careful not to let it boil. Pour it while hot into the whitewash. It is most essential that the size be fresh or the smell of it will be quite intolerable. Any coloring—green, pink, blue, or fawn—may be added.

Great Man's Queer Fancy.

Daniel Webster had a curious fancy for painting the faces of his cattle. One week the poor beasts would walk around with blue faces, and the next would appear with red ones. The effect was so novel that it pleased him, and from that time forth he changed the color whenever he had a few minutes to spare, and would laugh heartily at the astonishment of his friends when they saw the queer-looking beasts.

Armor for the Gopher.

"Gophers who fear snakes," says a traveler, "might try the tin armor tactics resorted to by wanderers in the tropical swamp lands. It is the custom of some explorers to fasten a bright tin disk over their ankles. This gleaming spot attracts the reptiles, which invariably strike at it and nowhere else. The snake is thus rendered harmless and leaves the snake in a position to receive a knockout blow at the intended victim's discretion."—London Chronicle.

Jefferson's Aim.

Jefferson sought to create in the university of the state an institution that would not only through traditional culture values give to the state "legislators and judges . . . and expound . . . structure of government," but would also "harmonize and promote the interests of agriculture, manufacture and commerce, and by well-formed views of political economy give free course to public industry."—Edward Kidder Graham.

On Peruvian Railways.

The railways of central Peru spread out in a Y, at the right-hand end of which is Huancayo, something more than 200 miles from Lima. At every railroad station, old women crowd through the cars selling the favorite nectar of the Incas, all purchasers drinking from the same cup, and generally several from the same filling. Nearly every traveler has his own supply of a more potent native beverage.

Unearth Tombstones of 1769.

The tombstone of "Johnathan, son of Robert and Esther Plume, deceased December 18, 1769," was unearthed by workmen excavating for a sewer connection in Branford place, Newark. It is known that during Revolutionary days a cemetery was located in this vicinity. —New York Evening Mail.

SHE IS HAILED "ANGORA QUEEN OF WEST"

It has often proved true that destitution and want in the extreme are the opening of the very channels to success. Such was the case of Mrs. Margaret Armer, who about 20 years ago was left a widow with six small children, with only a section of arid land in New Mexico as a means of support.

Today she is the proud owner of 3500 pure bred Angora goats, which she has made a business of breeding. Mrs. Armer says her success is due to a thorough understanding of the goat industry and the ability to make quick decisions in purchasing desirable foundation stock.

Some of her alms have gone as far as South Africa and New Zealand.

Three hundred bucks and dams are auctioned each year, few selling for less than $500 each.

Careful Driver

I drive my car with jealous care, all laws and statutes minding, and only pause anon to swear when balky valves need grinding. I drive upon old fashioned lines, as though a speed cop fearing; I honk my horn when danger signs before me are appearing. I put my hand out when I'd turn, so those behind may know it, and doubtless they remark, "Gol-dern! But he's the cautious poet!" Twelve miles an hour is what I hit, when I go forth to travel; my wheels don't fill the air with grit, or throw up chunks of gravel. A man so careful, you would say, must dodge all kinds of danger; but one is crippled every day, and I'm that pilgrim stranger. Day after day they bring me home, home to my weeping nieces, with compound fractures in my dome, and organs shot to pieces. The speed fiends go their crazy ways unhurt, and still go faster; the reckless drivers spend their days unscratched, nor know disaster. But I, who follow all the rules, am marked for daily slaughter; and when my present poultice cools, they'll put on one that's hotter.

Road Law Easy to Learn.

Highway law is not hard to understand. It is universally recognized as the clearest expressed and the simplest system of law on our statute books. It speaks, not in terms of dead phrasing, but in simple, direct, forceful language. Any motorist who cares to do so can ascertain his legal rights and liabilities in his state in 15 minutes' reading, and he won't need an attorney to interpret it for him, either. —Charles C. Sherlock in Motor.

Great Russian Port.

The harbor of Odessa, in south Russia, is formed by several stone piers and a long breakwater and is protected in every direction. It is the only port in southern Russia where ships drawing 30 feet can come directly to the docks, and the docks are larger and better equipped than those of any other Black sea port. The depth is 35 feet on one side and 13 to 17 feet on the other.

Dentist's Memorial.

It is a far cry from the powdered hen-bone feds, the incantations and pain, the gold rings and ox teeth of the forgotten past to the work of a modern dental surgeon, but like his predecessors in the profession, the modern operator leaves behind him his monument. It may be a cross of gold which he erects to his memory as a product of his mechanical skill, or maybe he has taught the children of the world the secrets of health or the esthetic value of a pleasing smile. —Exchange.

Great Man's Vanity.

Julius Caesar was sensitive regarding his baldness. So much did this worry him that he became ill. When the day came on which Caesar discovered that there was no remedy he had a crown made that covered the entire top and back of his head, but it was a torture to wear it.

Modern Girl.

A Clay Center physician sent the office girl out to do collecting, according to the Dispatch. She was back in less than an hour with a ring, a marriage certificate, a man, and $1, all of which she had collected. —Kansas City Star.

haunted and retired toward midnight. An hour later he was seized by a sudden pain in the region of the heart. Medical aid was immediately summoned and powerful stimulants administered, but Mr. Keyes sank rapidly, and the end came at 1:30 o'clock.

Lumber Experience Wide.

John Pease Keyes was born in Winona, Minn., on March 19, 1868. He attended the University of Michigan, being graduated in 1892 as a mechanical engineer. While in college he became a member of Phi Delta Theta fraternity. He was a brother-in-law of Dr. D. F. Brooks, president of the Brooks-Scanlon Lumber company.

In 1893 he became associated with the Brooks interests, spending eight years in their employ in St. Paul and nine years as general manager of their plant at Scanlon, Minn. From there he was sent to Powell River, B. C., where for two years he was in charge of construction of the pulp mill now in operation at that point. In 1912 he came to Bend, was vice president of The Bend Company, in which the Brooks-Scanlon Lumber company was interested, and was general manager of the old Bend Company mill. He was in charge of construction of the present Brooks-Scanlon mill here and manager of the business since operation began in 1916. Recently he was chosen vice president of the company.

Prominent in Civic Affairs.

Always prominent in civic affairs, Mr. Keyes was president of the Bend Commercial club, declining reelection at the end of his 1916 term of office. He was a director of the club at the time of his death. In 1916 he was elected a member of the board of directors of the Bend school district and reelected at the expiration of his three-year term in 1919. He was chairman of the Bend chapter of the American Red Cross since its formation in 1917. He was also a member of the board of directors of the State Chamber of Commerce in the first year of its organization. The only fraternal organization to which he belonged was the Elks.

In June, 1901, he married Miss Jennie Dudgeon of St. Paul. Mrs. Keyes and three children, Jeannette, Elizabeth and Robert, survive him in Bend. He was also the uncle of H. K. Brooks of this city.

One brother and three sisters of Mr. Keyes are now residing in Winona and another brother is general manager of the Brooks-Scanlon plant in Kentwood, Louisiana.

Honoring the memory of one of Bend's most prominent citizens, the city school were dismissed Friday, the banks closed their doors at 1 o'clock in the afternoon, and work was suspended in the afternoon at the milling plant which he had headed.
