CLASSMATES ATTEND FUNERAL OF CHILD

Funeral Services Held Yesterday From Chapel For Eight Year Old Charles Bidwell, Jr.

Funeral services were held Sunday afternoon from the Niswonger chapel for 8-year-old Charles Bidwell, Jr., son of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Bidwell of this city, who died Friday at St. Charles hospital as the result of a complication of diseases. He had been ill for two weeks. The family has resided in Bend since September, coming here from California.

The boy had been a pupil in the third grade of the city schools and the members of the class, with Mrs. O. A. Thomsen, his instructor, were in attendance at the funeral. Four classmates, Arthur Robinson, Delbert Hale, George Berg and Lunday Orr, were pallbearers. The funeral service was conducted by the Rev. J. Edgar Purdy of the Methodist church and interment was made at Pilot Butte cemetery.

Getting Down to the White Meat

In talking about Thanksgiving Clothes—Here are the facts and figures to prove WHY we figure on doing the biggest Thanksgiving business in the history of the store and why we are not going to be disappointed. Read each item carefully—lots more we could mention—if newspaper space was free.

Kuppenheimer and Michaels-Stern Co. Suits at 25 per cent discount. You never saw a bigger variety this side of a world's fair.

Mallory Hats, $5.00 to $7.50. You know the hat, but you don't know the selections.

Neckwear, 75c to $2.50. To match the happiest moment you can recall.

Ireland's Gloves, $2.00 to $4.25—go hand in hand with "glad to meet you."

Interwoven and Phoenix Hose, 60c to $1.00—to match your gait or your garters.

Kuppenheimer and Michaels-Stern Co. Overcoats at 25 per cent discount. Every coat could be marked up $10 and still be attractive to the man who is attracted by beauty, brawn and bearing.

Manhattan Shirts, $4.50 to $10.00. The colors alone are worth a page—if we had time.

Munsing Union Suits, $2.69 to $12.50. There isn't as much comfort in a Morris chair.

And last but not least, Boys' Suits and Overcoats at 25 per cent discount—in every conceivable good material and model that matches a careful mother's judgment.

We brought this stock to Bend for YOUR Thanksgiving feast—and it's complete from Drumsticks to Dressing.

WON FRAISE FOR HISTORY

Work of Charles Rollin, Famous Frenchman, Was for Many Years a Standard Book.

No less a personage than Voltaire praises the work known as "Rollin's Ancient History," which, though now obsolete, was for years in its English translation the standard work on the Egyptians, Carthaginians, Assyrians, and other ancient nations.

Voltaire, while praising the work highly, alleges that it would have been better if the author had been more of a philosopher, able to distinguish better the false from the true, incredible from the probable, and to sacrifice the useless. Notwithstanding, he said it is the best compilation in any language, because compilers are seldom eloquent, and Rollin was.

Charles Rollin was a Frenchman, and he died at Paris, the place of his birth, on Sept. 14, 1741. This celebrated man rose from poverty and obscurity to a position of the greatest dignity. He was the son of a cutler, yet at the age of 33 he was made rector of the University of Paris, which office he adorned by the sweetness of his character, his learning, probity and moderation.

Until fifty years ago his history was a stock book, when it began to be neglected on account of the many discoveries giving a new cast to our knowledge of ancient history.—Chicago Journal.

INDIAN FIGHTER NOT A GIANT

Daniel Boone Said to Have Been Small in Stature—Man of Deep Religious Conviction.

Daniel Boone is generally pictured as a giant in stature, of swarthy complexion, and a grim leader at a grim period in the country's history. Archibald Henderson in the Century draws a very different picture of the pioneer. According to him Boone was a scant five feet eight inches, although broad of shoulder, and his eyes were a mild blue, topped by fair eyebrows. He was shy, naive, benign and simple. He was a super-woodsman, a master Indian fighter, but only an indifferent surveyor.

While acting as an agent for a company seeking wealth through land grants and colonization, he himself looked upon his work as that of an instrument of Providence, specially ordained by God to settle the wilderness. This religious fervor he carried with him in his wildest adventures and most bloody battles, and he promptly credited every success, great or small, to Providence. His two greatest exploits were the exploration of the trans-Alleghany region and the opening of the Transylvania trail, the path that ran through the Cumberland and opened the beauties and richness of Kentucky to the pioneer hordes from the Atlantic seaboard.

BEND AND MADRAS PLAY 7-7 CONTEST

Dutt Sustains Broken Collar Bone In Hard Fought Game—Birdsall Crosses Line in Second Half.

Honors as to scores were even in the Bend-Madras game, played in the Jefferson county seat, for the contest concluded with a 7-7 tie. Greatly outweighed by the heavy Madras team, Bend put up a great offensive as well as defensive game, and started a march up the field in the second half a few minutes after Madras had scored which resulted in a duplication of the Madras tally, Birdsall crossing the line.

Dutt, Bend fullback, went out with a broken collar bone on the fifth down in the third period. A pileup resulted after he had tackled the Madras runner, and the injury was sustained while he lay at the bottom of the heap.

In the final period Daph Haner missed a drop-kick by inches.

HECTIC PAJAMAS WIN POPULARITY

Londoners Turn From Gaudy Clothing For Day Wear, But Make Up For It At Night.

(By United Press to The Bend Bulletin.)

LONDON, Nov. 24.—The white-spatted and monocled man who yesterday gave color and excitement to the West End of London has vanished.

There is an air of languor in the quiet grays and chaste browns of the suits worn by London's young men today. Mostly coats wrinkle and trousers sag. Handkerchiefs and socks, once so passionately lurid, have sunk into somnolent shades. The erstwhile dazzle dude is now but a blur on the landscape—but only during the day.

At night the dull chrysalis turns into a brilliant butterfly. Inquiries made at the best known London hostlers elicited the information that, while the bright-hued handkerchiefs, socks and ties are a drug on the market, it is exactly the reverse in the matter of pajamas.

The more brilliant the pajamas the bigger the sale, and hostlers find it difficult to keep pace with the violence of hue demanded in masculine night attire.

The white day spats are forgotten in the hectic quest for purple bed-socks.
