INDIAN FIGHTER NOT A GIANT

Daniel Boone Said to Have Been Small in Stature—Man of Deep Religious Conviction.

Daniel Boone is generally pictured as a giant in stature, of swarthy complexion, and a grim leader at a grim period in the country's history. Archibald Henderson in the Century draws a very different picture of the pioneer. According to him Boone was a scant five feet eight inches, although broad of shoulder, and his eyes were a mild blue, topped by fair eyebrows. He was shy, naive, benign and simple. He was a super-woodsman, a master Indian fighter, but only an indifferent surveyor.

While acting as an agent for a company seeking wealth through land grants and colonization, he himself looked upon his work as that of an instrument of Providence, specially ordained by God to settle the wilderness. This religious fervor he carried with him in his wildest adventures and most bloody battles, and he promptly credited every success, great or small, to Providence. His two greatest exploits were the exploration of the trans-Alleghany region and the opening of the Transylvania trail, the path that ran through the Cumberland and opened the beauties and richness of Kentucky to the pioneer hordes from the Atlantic seaboard.

EVERYTHING THAT IS BIG HAS HAD ITS SMALL BEGINNING

At some time the large fortune was small, but it grew. Your fortune may be now in its infancy; you may not have more than a dollar that doesn't need to be spent at once for some necessity. But put that dollar away, in a safe place; let it draw interest; by and by put another dollar with it, and then another and another. Like a child your fortune will grow—steadily, surely. In time, what you have put aside, added to what your savings have earned, will amount to enough to make a good investment. You have made the beginning of your fortune.
