BOOSTER DAY OF INTEREST TO THE CHRISTMAS SHOPPER

MERCHANTS' FEATURE CHRISTMAS GOODS IN BOOSTER OFFERINGS

PRICES LOWER THAN USUAL THIS MONTH

Bargains at Every Store This Time are Especially Attractive

Christmas shopping commands the entire attention of everyone just now. Around the fireplace, at social gatherings, on the street, in the schools and churches, everyone seems to have but a single thought—"What shall I get that will make an acceptable gift." Knowing this, and wanting to be of the greatest possible service to all, the merchants of Bend have made an earnest endeavor to offer only the merchandise that would serve as useful Christmas gifts for their booster specials this Booster Day.

Every Booster Day has offered an opportunity to save money. Prices in many instances have been offered below what the article actually cost. But if you will take the time to look the list of bargains over for this Booster Day you will find that never before have such remarkable prices ever been offered in Bend since pre-war time. Every store that has listed an article for sale on this day has priced that article at far less than the same article has ever been listed before.

The fact that these articles are all appropriate for Christmas gifts and that they are so much cheaper than usual, seems a double inducement why the people of Bend should take advantage of this Booster Day saving.

BUFFALO WOOL UTILIZED FOR RANGERS' TOGS

That original American, the bison, is going to be asked to pay his board. Supported in royal idleness for many years by the government, the buffalo, once king of the plains, must now bow to the changing times and become a producer instead of remaining a mere ornament. Each member of the buffalo family produces annually much fine wool, which in these days makes them desirable citizens in the best sense of the term. Furthermore, unlike those lesser monarchs who have been forced to flee their realms, King Bison will continue to rule over America's wonderland, Yellowstone National park, and his profile to adorn the nickel.

All the park authorities ask of their star boarder is the old clothes he sheds each spring. The big Yellowstone herd of 500 grown animals turns loose annually, when warm weather comes, several hundred pounds of wool, which could be increased by clipping. Ordinarily the wool has gone to waste, but recently a collection of some of the finest fiber has been made for the purpose of experimenting with the manufacture of coats and blankets for the park rangers.

The Canadian government and private individuals in the United States have been successful in utilizing buffalo wool, official reports showing that the cloth produced from it is lighter in weight and offers greater resistance to cold than material made of sheep's wool. It is these qualities that particularly interest the National park service, for the rangers who guard the Yellowstone from murderous poachers in the winter have to tramp many miles through the snow on skis or snowshoes, carrying heavy packs filled with "grub" and bedding, and under such circumstances every ounce of weight that can be saved is of immense importance.

A CHEAP WAY OUT

"You've got indigestion, that's what's the matter with you," said the doctor.

"Oh, that's what it is, then?" inquired the patient.

"That's it. You've been eating a lot of meat, I suppose?"

"I have, yes."

"Well, now you're paying for it." "Would you mind telling my butcher that, doctor?"

A BRAINSTORM

Among the many answers received by the Booster editor, we find the one printed below, in answer to the November puzzle. The judges have decided this answer the most worthy of the prize. As you will note, the writer asks that he name be withheld, so this concession will be granted for this time only, but in no case hereafter, as it appears only fair to the other contestants that the winner's name be published. The credits of $5 dollars in merchants, donated by five of the Bend stores, will be mailed promptly to her.

Sisters, Oregon.

"Mr. Booster Editor.

"Dear Sir: It is not a custom of mine to dabble in prize-winning contests; neither do I rate myself as a matrimonial entanglement specialist. But the Booster puzzles, or brainstorm department, is creating a great deal of converse in our section of the country. After one of these neighborhood discussions, the following inspiration came to me, so I decided to send it to you for your approval. If by chance I should come near enough to receive an honorable mention, kindly call me Mrs. "X," as I would rather not be brought into the limelight of neighborhood gossip, for, when the curtain rises across the footlights in our section, they expect too much of the performer.

"Some years ago, while on a vacation in Atlanta, the son of a wealthy mine owner of Montana met an attractive widow and, soon after their meeting, married her. The day the son wired his father of his dip into the icy water of matrimony, he received a wire from the senior member of the family, stating that he also had married, but that his bride was a young specialty silk saleslady, who had arrived in their home town some weeks prior and, owing to the extreme fascination of the elderly gentleman, had remained long enough to give him time to propose, which he did, and they were quietly married and were on their way to New York on a honeymoon. The son, on learning this, at once prepares to make New York one of the stopovers on his wedding tour.

"Some few days following the telegraphic correspondence between father and son, they and their wives met at a downtown hotel in the great city and found, to their surprise, that the father had married the daughter of his son's wife.

"One Christmas, several years later, while father and son were enjoying an after dinner smoke, the question of relationship between their offspring became the topic of discussion. After much disagreement and several "I can't see how you got that," they decided that the children of the father must be half aunts and uncles to the children of the son.

"Thanking you very kindly for the time you have taken to peruse this jumble of words, I beg to remain, "A might-have-been author, but a milk maid now.

"Mrs. X."

QUITE DIFFERENT

"Did you say my head was 'solid ivory'?"

"No, indeed. I never use such language."

"What did you say, then?"

"I merely remarked that you carried more osseous matter above your shoulders than any other man I had ever met."

"Oh, that's different."

TIME OUT!

"Gosh!" said the frosh, "here it is 12 o'clock, and I should leave at 10:30."

"Fine!" said his senior girl. "That gives us 10 1/2 hours yet."

PLAIN TRUTH

He (after the quarrel) — Then what did you marry me for?

She—Mother figured it up at the time and said it was for about a million and a half, I think.
