

BALLARD URGES KNOWLEDGE OF FARMING NEEDS

COUNTY AGENT HEAD GIVES ADVICE

WAYS TO AID POINTED

Study of Farm Bureau Program Advised—A. J. Harter Asks Longer Banking Hours—Willite Draws Remarks From Speakers.

Mutual understanding must be the basis for successful cooperative relations between town and country. There is no fundamental difference between the farmer and the city dweller. If the commercial organization of a city sincerely wishes to reach a common ground of understanding with the farmer, the best way to do it is to find out the constructive program which the county farm bureau has mapped out, then offer to assist in making this program a success.

This was the advice given to the Bend Commercial club Thursday by F. L. Ballard, state leader of county agents, when he spoke at the forum meeting of the organization at the gymnasium. Mr. Ballard declared that town and country are mutually dependent. Deschutes county, he said, is favorably known throughout the state as a section where the towns are taking an active interest in the country.

Mr. Ballard also spoke briefly on the state marketing bill enacted at the 1921 session of the legislature. He pointed out that it legalizes a five-year contract between growers and cooperative associations. "It is not Townleyism," he emphasized, "but it will keep Townleyism out. It will not hold up the people, but it will eliminate wastes of various kinds, such, for instance, as those incident to lack of standardization."

Objects to Bank Hours. A. J. Harter, president of the Deschutes Valley Shorthorn association, asserted that a real service could be made to the farmers if the banks were to keep open on Saturday afternoons, the time that is most convenient for the farmers' marketing. "You have fine roads and camp grounds for the tourist, but what have you for the farmer?" he asked.

Mr. Harter suggested a real spirit of sociability between city business man and farmer, then went on to mention the tuberculin tests, for which a majority of dairymen and breeders of thoroughbred beef animals have petitioned. "A few farmers don't want these tests," he said, "but if the people of Bend really want to help the cause of better farming, they will demand milk and butter from tuberculin-tested herds."

Fred N. Wallace, president of the Deschutes County Farm bureau, spoke in favor of the reestablishment of the city rest room, which had already been discussed by Mrs. V. A. Forbes and Mrs. J. F. Arnold, and warned Bend merchants against propaganda which is being circulated to the effect that "Bend is always bound to be a high-priced town." This, he said, is the slogan of those who are trying to get trade away from Bend.

One of the greatest services which could be made to the rural districts within a short distance of the city would be in extending light and power lines, he said.

Leverett Is Speaker.

R. A. Ward pointed out the importance of the farming industry when he quoted figures to show that $9,500,000 is invested in farm property in this county. Altitude and climate make Deschutes county especially adapted to become the center of a great pure-bred stock district, he asserted.

R. S. Hamilton, speaking in the early part of the evening, pointed out the need for a closer interest between farm and town. C. J. Leverett, member of the city council, was called on and responded by reading a letter which he had written to a sister on the Rio Grande. He mentioned early debates which he held with a man who was later to become a United States senator, excoriated the tendencies of the modern dance, extolled the quality of his wife's cooking, frankly voiced his belief that C. S. Reed, president of the Western Willite Road Construction Co., is a great salesman, and concluded by listing some of the "before the war" prices which are being made by Bend merchants.

Council Amuses Whisnant. A. Whisnant championed Willite, said that the council has no right to consider breaking the paving contracts made by the former city administration, declared that the present council is one of the most amusing things in the city, and urged that if contracts should be broken it will be at least two years before the resulting legal actions can be fought out in the courts.

C. A. Warner, president of the Bend Merchants' association, told of the campaign which has been waged for months through the retailers' monthly publication, "The Booster," to give bargain prices on Booster day. Merchants who "laid down" in this campaign, he said, were those who were not offering real bargains.

An elaborate dinner, served by the ladies of the Christian church, preceded the program of addresses.

MUST WRITE PLOT FOR COBB MOVIES

Series of Scenes Must Be Grouped About Central Theme, and Sub-Titles Are Yet to Be Written.

Before a private showing can be made here of the movie films taken during the hunting expeditions made last fall by Irvin S. Cobb and N. G. Jacobson and A. Whisnant of Bend, the series of scenes must be grouped about a central plot, states Mr. Jacobson. Sub-titles for the production must also be written. To Mr. Whisnant will fall the task of writing the story, with possible assistance from Mr. Cobb.

The first three reels indicate that the production will be highly successful, portraying not only the best of Central Oregon's scenic wonders, but also containing many situations rich in humor. Mr. Jacobson says.

BOY SCOUTS START SPRING ACTIVITIES

Increase in Membership Planned—All Bend Boys Over 12 Years of Age Are Eligible.

Spring activities of the Boy Scouts are well under way, according to J. Edgar Purdy, scoutmaster of the Bend troop. Meetings are held on Friday evenings at 6:30 o'clock each week and much interest is being shown in the work by the members.

A full troop of 32 scouts has been organized and plans are being made to increase the membership to include all the boys in Bend who are over the age of 12 years.

Ralph Curtis has been appointed assistant scout master and E. L. Payne, commissioner of the council consisting of Clyde M. McKay, S. W. Moore, E. D. Gilson, J. A. Eastes, C. S. Hudson, Paul C. King and J. W. Collette.

DINER SCHEDULE ON O-W. R. & N. CHANGED

For the benefit of day passengers making the trip from Portland to Bend, the dining car will be opened on the main line beginning at 11:30 o'clock in the morning. It is announced in a letter received by W. C. Birdsall, manager of the Pilot Butte Inn, from O-W. R. & N. headquarters in Portland. The change is made solely for the convenience of Central Oregon passengers, as the branch line train carries no dining car.

Young Wives Will Be Given Chance To Learn Cooking

Brides who failed to learn to cook before changing their names will be offered an emergency course next winter if the plans of City Superintendent S. W. Moore for the 1921-1922 night school are carried out. The suggestion that home economics be added to the curriculum came originally from the Woman's Civil league it is understood.

Next Thursday night will mark the closing of what Superintendent Moore characterizes as the most successful term of night school ever held in Bend. Attendance was larger than in any previous year, and the results accomplished were so good that recognition by the state board for vocational training is expected. This would mean aid in the sum of approximately $400 for this year's expenses.

BENEFITS FOR DISTRICT SEEN IN LEGISLATION

H. B. 240 REPLACED BY RESOLUTION

WATER STUDY CERTAIN

Overturf Explains Situation on Return From Session At Salem—Expects Location and Construction on North and South Highway.

Although House Bill 240, for a commission to study the most efficient uses of the waters of Central Oregon, was killed in the senate by Jay H. Upton, of Prineville, a joint resolution which Upton later allowed to go through has exactly the same effect as the bill would have had, Representative H. J. Overturf, author of the house measure, declared on his return from Salem. His bill had been shorn of appropriations before it reached the senate, so that it could not provide the appointment of a salaried state member of the proposed commission. As the question now stands, the resolution, with the assurance of Governor Olcott and the U. S. Reclamation service, means that the water resources of Central Oregon will be investigated as Bend had asked.

Senator Upton's action in defeating House Bill 240 was taken after he had led those favoring the bill to believe that he would keep his hands off the measure, Mr. Overturf said.

Bill Killed by Railroads. Another measure of great importance to Bend and all Central Oregon, House Bill 362, giving the state public service commission power to permit or order railroad extension, was introduced by the Deschutes county delegation, and lost in the senate only because of the enormous pressure brought to bear against it by railroad interests, the Bend representative stated. "It took all the railroad legal talent in the state to beat it, though," he said.

Regarding House Bill 178 and 180 aiming at the removal of State Engineer Percy A. Cupper, Mr. Overturf declared that in fighting for the passage of these measures, Denton G. Burdick, of Redmond, had taken a sound drubbing, but had won a victory for his constituents in bringing about a change of policy in the engineer's office.

Relocation of Highway Expected. The cooperative marketing bill is to a certain extent an experiment, Mr. Overturf considers, and on this measure which has been strongly favored by O. A. C. experts, he was not ready to express an opinion. The uniform false statement law, and the sheepherders' lien law he regards as important to this section. The latter law, however, he considers, should have offered more protection to bankers.

By the passage of House Bill 314, the highway commission is given full authority to change state highway routes.

This may alter the McKenzie Pass highway route against Bend's interest, but at the same time it will mean the straightening of The Dalles-California highway shortening that road some 30 miles by the elimination of the long detour through Antelope. A re-location and some construction is assured for this year, Mr. Overturf said.

The reappointment act as it was finally worked out, is greatly to the advantage of Central Oregon, Mr. Overturf believes. The representative district is made compact by lopping off Grant county, while for the remaining district one representative is added, making a total of three for Deschutes, Jefferson, Crook, Lake, and Klamath. The district was barely defeated in the endeavor to gain a second senator.
