

HOPE FOR RAILROAD EXTENSION TO BEND FROM LAKEVIEW GROWS

Indications that both the Western Pacific and the Southern Pacific railways are seeking to obtain possession of the Nevada, California, and Oregon line, which, it is believed, would mean standardization and extension of the road from Lakeview to Bend, are reported in the account of the hearing at Alturas on the petition of the N. C. & O. to discontinue operation, published under an Alturas date line in the Portland Evening Telegram. The hearing was held by the California railroad commission and the Oregon Public service commission, representing the United States interstate commerce commission.

The road comprises the only transportation facilities of a vast area of South Central Oregon and Northern California and its discontinuance will practically cause bankruptcy of a rich agricultural and timber belt with a valuation of approximately $50,000,000, according to testimony of officials of the road in the hearing.

Representatives of three states, three railroads, four municipalities, five commerce chambers and three counties participated in the hearing as interested parties. The San Francisco Chamber of Commerce was represented by Seth Mann, said to be one of the foremost authorities on railroad tariffs on the Pacific coast. Mann was working for the continued operation of the road, as thousands of dollars in business now comes from Lake county to San Francisco banks and merchants.

E. H. Walker, tariff expert for the Nevada railroad commission, represented the Reno Chamber of Commerce, in the interest of Reno banks and business men. H. H. Corey heard the case for the Oregon public service commission, J. C. Harriman for the California commission and W. J. Hanford of California presided as examiner.

"Both the Southern and Western Pacific roads were represented by their attorneys and high officials, says The Telegram's report of the hearing. "C. M. Levey, president of the Western Pacific, who recently intimated that his road was contemplating the purchase of the N. C. & O., took an active interest in the proceedings, as did the Southern Pacific officials."

"It is believed these two roads are competing for purchase of the N. C. & O., as both draw large tonnage from the territory served by it. "Citizens throughout Lake county and other territory which will be affected by the proposed discontinuance of the narrow gauge are hoping that one of the larger companies will take over the road, make it a standard gauge and extend it to Bend."

More than 20 members of the Lakeview Chamber of Commerce were on hand to be used as witnesses to show cause why the road should not be discontinued."

BEAUTIFUL CHORUS NUMBERS FEATURE OF MUSICAL COMEDY

Dancing which would have done credit to a big city playhouse was enjoyed by last Wednesday night's "Land of Happiness" audience at the American Legion building, when Bend girls, most of them high school students, appeared in beautiful numbers directed by R. W. Hillam, who is also the author of the comedy. In spite of the fact that two weeks ago many of the girls had done no fancy dancing of any sort, they all maintained perfect time and technique last night in their first public appearance.

An audience which comfortably filled the auditorium enjoyed the "gags" of the minstrel show in the first act, the special song and dance numbers, the antics of the cannibals in the second act, and most of all the artistic work of the beautifully costumed chorus.

Leading parts were taken by Miss Dorothy Rand, who made a favorable impression with her singing, Art Stewart, who had the part of interlocutor in the first act and juvenile in the second, R. W. Hillam as the cannibal king, Miss Audrey McCune as "Mrs. Moneybags," Miss Fern Aellen as the king's niece, R. W. Casebeer as "Mickey," and C. H. Smith as the king's secretary. Speaking parts in the minstrel were well handled by Norman Cobb and Guy Beiden as end men, Dr. L. W. Gatchell as the sergeant, C. H. Smith as "Ham Bologna," and B. F. Purdy as the apache.

Special numbers of merit were songs and dances of Jack Alden, interpretive dances by Misses Fern Aellen and Lola Whitmore, and songs by Miss Rand. Wilson George's orchestra played for most of the numbers, Miss Dorothy Gerish playing piano accompaniments for some of the special numbers.

Girls in the chorus were Barbara Lochr, Fern Aellen, Helen McLaughlin, Marion Sather, Leora Connarn, Linnie Brick, Lola Whitmore, Mildred Simmons, Hollis Swingle, Hazel Brown, Mary Sumner, Lillian Brown, Gladys McConnell, Catherine Addina, Lois Triplett, Ernestine Huppich, Helen Turmire, Erma Lehmann and Juanita Gillis.

The cannibals were Norman Cobb, James Frederickson, Dr. L. W. Gatchell, Ralph Curtis, Guy Beiden, B. F. Purdy and Ivan Murphy. Soldiers and sailors were Jack Mortenson, Glen Whittaker, Ted Meagher, Willard Houston, Blain Orrell, Leonard Strom, Duncan McKay, Donald Conway, Charles Benson and Kenneth Ballentyne.

CULVER SHUT OUT IN SECOND PERIOD

Visitors Fail To Score During Last Half of Final Game of Central Oregon High School Series.

Culver high school's basketball team tied the Bend high quintet for the first half of the game Saturday night, then failed to score a single point in the second half. Bend won 23 to 8. The reason for Culver's showing in the first half, however, was that the Bend high team made a holiday of it, the forwards playing guard positions and the guards taking the scoring responsibility.

This game ended the Central Oregon series, Bend tying for second place with Madras high, the championship going to Redmond.

The teams: Bend—forwards, Kohfield, Johnson (9); center, Orrell (6); guards, Norcott (8), Claypool. Culver—forwards, McBrain (2), Keeney (4); center, Boegell (2); guards, Keeney, Youngstrom. Referee, Van Allen.

STRIKE HOLDING UP PRINTING OF BONDS

Printing of the bonds which are to finance the state bonus and loans to ex-service men is being held up by the lithographers' strike in Portland, reported Charles W. Erskine on his return Monday from the meeting at which 80 appraisers and attorneys met with the members of the World War Veterans' State Aid commission. This will not hold up the payment of the bonus for long, he stated, as the work will be done by the state printing office if it is not done in Portland soon.

Each one of the rules of the commission was taken up and explained, the attorneys and appraisers getting much valuable information to aid them in handling the applications and appraisals, said Erskine. Only three members of the commission were present, he said, the others being ill.

SNOWSHOES IN USE IN CARRYING MAIL

High Drifts In Road Necessitate Use of Saddle Horses and Foot Carriers—Stock May Die.

Mail and express are being carried on horseback and by men on snowshoes from Brothers to points farther from Bend on the High Desert, on account of the deep snow and drifts on the roads. R. N. Palmerton is hauling the mail to Millican on account of the extra work which the regular carrier is obliged to do.

The present winter is a hard one for range stock on the desert, and many are expected to die unless some way of feeding them is arranged.

CERTIFICATION VALUE TOLD BY POTATO EXPERT

SEED SELLING PRICE DOUBLED, STATED

DISEASE IS COMBATED

Knowledge of Disease Forms and Appearance Gained By Visit of Inspector—Hyslop Urges Rotation To Avoid Diseases.

That the selling price of potato seed is more than doubled by certification, was stated by G. R. Hyslop in his Farmers' Week talk at the court house Friday morning. The farmer also gains, through the visits of the inspector, a knowledge of the diseases, their appearance and effect, and is encouraged to the raising of disease free potatoes and the use of good seed.

Certification becomes more important as the amount of disease increases in a community, Hyslop showed. This past season in Deschutes county 400 acres were eliminated on their first inspection for having over 5 per cent of leaf mosaic, 18 acres for blackleg and 51 acres for mixed varieties of potatoes.

Registry for certification is useless, said Hyslop, if the farmer will not destroy plants which were pointed out to him as diseased on the first inspection.

More Certification Need There will be 5,000 bushels of potatoes certified for seed this year, and 500,000 bushels planted in Oregon, said the speaker, showing that there is room for much more certification.

Potatoes should not be raised on the same ground two years in succession, Hyslop emphasized. If the ground is used two years, a different sort of potatoes should not be planted, for there is sure to be a quantity of volunteers of the first variety. The tendency to disease is greater when land is planted to potatoes several years.

Tells How to Plant Seed pieces should be not smaller than 1 1/2 ounces, said Hyslop. The cut surface should be as small as possible, to avoid rot, and the seed should be dusted with land plaster. Seed should be planted 4 or 5 inches deep, and the ground should be fairly moist at time of planting. The two man planter has been found most successful on a majority of tests, he said.

Sulphate of ammonia is the best fertilizer for fields which have not been previously in alfalfa, he stated. The sulphate should not come in direct contact with seed, as it would kill it.

Flooding Danger Pointed

The principle of irrigating potatoes is to keep them growing steadily, Hyslop said. There is danger of drowning out the plants, and of starting a second growth with late irrigation. Where the growing season is as short as it is here, much irrigation with cold water retards the growth, he said.

There is no economical field treatment for scab, said Hyslop. The seed may be treated and selected, and fields badly infected should not be used for a period of five years.

Disease Control Urged

Extreme effort toward the control of potato disease, along the lines of crop rotation, seed selection, seed disinfecting, "roguing" or destroying diseased plants, use of an isolated seed plot, spraying, and careful storage were urged by M. B. McKay, O. A. C. plant disease specialist, in his talk in the afternoon.

All of these methods were declared to be of advantage in fighting most of the diseases, more or less according to whether the disease is carried in the seed or in the field.

Every potato planted for seed in Oregon should be treated with mercuric chloride, more commonly called corrosive sublimate, said McKay. This is the standard treatment for rhizoctonia. The potatoes should be cleaned and soaked in water, then placed in the solution for an hour and a half. Details of this treatment will be covered in a booklet soon to be published by the agricultural college.

Mosaic Spread Rapid Stem end discoloration does not necessarily mean wilt, and has been abandoned as a sure test. Roguing is the means to be used in getting rid of wilt, and in the seed plot the plant next to the wilted one should also be pulled.

Mosaic, with which are associated leafroll and curly dwarf, spread very rapidly in the field even without the presence of aphids, the insect which usually carries these diseases. This is especially true in sandy soils. Hill selection has no value here, roguing and spraying to get rid of the insects being the best methods.

McKay advised the use of a separate seed plot, using its general yield to plant the following year in the main field, and hill selecting for the next year's seed plot.

A uniform time of hatching, preferably April 1 for light breeds and March 1 for heavy breeds, is very important toward successful poultry raising. H. E. Cosby emphasized in his talk Thursday at the Farmers' meeting. This is an ideal rule for the reason that pullets hatched at that time will reach their best laying season in October, and maintain it through November and December, the months of highest prices for eggs.

Having all of the chickens hatch at the same time simplifies the brooding problem, and avoids the tendency which the best poultryman has to neglect the later hatches.

Efforts to secure a 290 egg hen have been accompanied by troubles of other kinds, said Cosby. The size of eggs and their color is as important as the number a hen lays, he declared. No egg should be hatched that weighs under two ounces.

Eggs should not be kept more than seven or eight days before placed in the incubator, said Cosby. They should not be allowed to chill, which they will do at about the freezing point, nor to reach a temperature of over 69 degrees Fahr.

A hen which has been forced to over production is not in condition to breed a strong chicken, said Cosby.

The best incubator which can be obtained is never too costly, said the speaker. There is little difference in advantage between the hot water and hot air systems. The important thing, he said, is to follow the instructions that come with that particular incubator, and not listen to other poultrymen's advice. The incubator must be level, and the thermometer must be accurate, he emphasized. The thermometer should be tested.

A record of temperature, three times daily, is valuable whether the hatch is successful or not, Cosby showed. The hatch should be over by the 21st day, but should not be hurried.
