HANDY GARDEN INCUBATOR, EASILY MADE, WILL SERVE AS SUBSTITUTE FOR THE HOT BED OR COLD FRAME

Perhaps for a majority of home-gardeners the cigar box or "flat" in a south window answers the purpose of a hotbed or cold frame. It is a thoroughly-ried and tested device of century-long use.

If boxes have not been stored in advance with a supply of earth, it will be necessary to acquire them now and to go out with a pickaxe or mattock and pry loose some frozen clods of earth to place in the cellar to thaw.

Plenty of pebbles, broken flower pots, crockery or rough, fibrous earth should be at hand to provide drainage, for good drainage is one of the secrets of success in indoor boxes. Bore holes in the bottom of the box. Over these scatter the pebbles or pot shreds and upon this place the coarser soil. The surface soil must be sifted carefully through a sieve, levelled down and firmed. The soil used here must be leaf mould or its equivalent in texture.

Plant the seeds in rows, cross-wise of the box. Broadcast sowing in window boxes is wasteful. A large portion of the plants are destroyed in watering and transplanting and often they are so thick they never have a fair chance to develop.

A cloth over the surface of the soil, or better still, a pane of glass will help to keep a more even temperature and retard evaporation. The cloth must be removed with the first sign of germination and the glass should be lifted and the moisture which has condensed upon it, wiped off from time to time.

Care in watering should be exercised, as careless sprinkling will wash seeds out of the ground and uproot newly germinated little plants. A fine spray or sprinkling with a whisk broom or a similar article is the best way. The boxes should never be soaked after germination starts, but just kept moist.

about it at the annual meeting of the National Council of the Boy Scouts of America which will be held at Chicago, March 29 and 30. But in any case, scouts from all over the country will suggest "Safety First" signs to be placed about parks and forests and wherever tourists go. Scouts are going in strong for nature study and are determined to do their part in this protective movement.

"SAFETY FIRST" FOR NATURE, SCOUT PLAN

Action May Be Taken At National Council Session Set For March 29 and 30 in Chicago.

"Safety First" is going to be applied to trees and wild flowers. It used to be the thoughtless custom to stroll across a railroad track, oblivious to an approaching express train, until the "Stop, Look, Listen" signs began to dot the landscape. The same idea will be introduced into national parks and everywhere that folks wander for a week-end rest, excepting the seashore. The ocean waves and the sands of the beach must look out for themselves. But the trees, the wild flowers, and the birds are to be shielded by "Safety First" signs from the thoughtless vandalism of the public.

Boy Scouts are giving leadership to this idea. Something may be done
